EXTOLS FARMERS TO TEACHERS

State College Dean, Addressing Adams County Public School Teachers, Tells of Necessity for Intelligent Farmers.

"Every Adams County boy living on a farm, and intending to make farming his life work, should consider his vocation not only as a desirable occupation but in the light of a real applied science", said Dean R. L. Watts, of the Pennsylvania State College at the opening session of the annual summer meeting of Adams County's public school teachers in Brua Chapel on yesterday.

"It is most important", continued Dean Watts, "for every boy who lives on a farm to have time for an adventure and to take delight in the location of the ways in which we live. It is now really essential that our boys and girls, who intend to continue on farms, should have a scientific knowledge of their work if they intend to make the greatest success from the time of endeavor.

"At State College last year there were enrolled 1000 students in the agricultural department, but there are 225,000 farms in the State, making the average only one to every 225 farms. To make the condition still more apparent, it is known that the majority of the students were from large towns and cities and not from the farms."

In closing Prof. Watts stated that it was to be desired that the rural teacher be thoroughly identified with the community in which she is located in order to be of the greatest benefit to the pupils.

The morning hour kept attendance and the response of the teachers of the county to Superintendent Roth's call for the annual meeting was one of the most gratifying in recent years. The opening day session all sang pieces of "America", Prof. Roth read the Scripture lesson and the class responded the Lord's Prayer in concert. The Zanerian System of Penmanship was established by the Zaner Co., of Columbus, Ohio, and the text used was taken up with an interesting talk on methods of play for children as seen by Miss Mary Brandon, of Harrisburg. Miss Braxton is the new teacher for the Gettysburg Colored School, and her talk followed that of the favorable indication of her ability.

"The teaching of domestic science in our public schools to-day is of just as much importance as the course in mathematics, reading or any of the branches that have been taught for many years," according to Mrs. J. L. Foulke, of the State Agricultural Department, who addressed the afternoon session of the summer meeting of Adams County school teachers in Brua Chapel on Wednesday afternoon.

The subject of Mrs. Foulke's address was "Home Economics and Domestic Science." She said, in part, that "domestic science really is the art of home-making and that both the rural and city pupils have a by right to learn in their to-day domestic science is recognized and is thought to be as important a subject as mathematics, writing, etc. In addition to this, the young people to-day are in school for longer terms and more years than some years ago and the teacher has a chance to do more practical work and give more instruction than formerly."

She cited an instance of a teacher in a Maryland school who has a class of sixty girls in cooking and it was nothing else to do, spent the time in making chicken-soup daily it as an illustration of how practical school training might become.

In conclusion she impressed on the teachers that beauty is necessary in the making of a home. "Form and fact it should be taught the girls that if they ever accumulate a bit of money in their own that beauty shall be placed among the first things to be stirred for, both in the home itself and its surroundings."

Several of the teachers told of their work in various summer schools and then Supt. Roth spoke of the Millar's Theatre where an illustrated lecture was given by Wilfred H. Schoff on "Through the Panama Canal and Down the West Coast of South America." Mr. Schoff is secretary of the Commercial Museum, Philadelphia.

Miss Helen Fuller and Miss Olive Hoke are spending ten days as members of a camping party at Pen Mar.

BUSINESS BARN AND CROPS ARE DESTROYED

Large Barn Near York Springs Burned in Fire Supposed to have been Caused by an Incendiary. All Stock Saved.

Starting in some mysterious manner, fire on Tuesday night destroyed a large barn near York Springs, owned by Edward Hetrick, of Hanover. With the barn there burned all the season's crops, fourteen sets of harness, several wagons and some machinery and much of the other equipment in the place. Mrs. Merritt Kennedy, the tenant, had some insurance but it is understood that Mr. Hetrick was not protected against loss by fire.

Mr. Kennedy and his family were at the York Springs on Tuesday evening and the fire was burning fiercely when they first ventured within reach of trouble at their home. They drove quickly to the place, situated about three-fourths of a mile from the town on the road to Wierman's Mill, and there they found a number of neighbors who had gathered. The blaze, which first showed, was spreading its way along the comb of the roof. Edward Brough was returning from Hanover when he saw it and he quickly gave an alarm.

The stock in the doors of the building he found the place a mass of flames and he had only time enough to get out several wagons from an adjoining shed. Fortunately the big barn and cattle were all in the fields at the time and no livestock was burned.

The origin of the fire is unknown but the flames caught several outbuildings which were also destroyed. The new dwelling was not in danger and no further damage was done.

No theory as to the origin of the fire is held other than that it was caused by an incendiary.

TRAFFIC DELAYED

Western Maryland Traffic Interrupted By Slight Mishap.

Traffic on the entire Eastern Division of the Western Maryland from Hagerstown to Baltimore, was tied up for nearly six hours Tuesday night as the result of the derailment of a baggage engine on the "horse-shoe" curve near Sulphur Springs. The work necessary was about an hour late as a result.

The new engine which has been in mountainside at a "runaway" speed left the rails at a point where the grade embankment was about twenty most disastrous. Applying the emergency, the engineer, Lewis Lantz could not be learned, jumped as the locomotive upset and rolled down the side. He escaped engine skidded a few inches further it would have toppled over and down the side of the hill. The engineer was badly injured by jumping.

FOR CROP RECORD

Farmers Send Crop Reports to State Capital.

Farmers in various parts of the State are anticipating the establishment of the State Bureau of Agricultural Statistics, for which provision was made by the last Legislature. Reports of the condition of crops, the harvesting this year are being sent in, the value of farm products, especially from the western part of the State, show large yields and the farmers are taking pride in putting them on record.

The State's plan is to organize a bureau of facts and statistics that will eventually give a list of every farmer in the State, together with his account of cultivated and wooded land, and the tabulation of crops and of wages and rental of farm laborers. Each

RECENT RAINS BIG HELP TO FARMERS

Crops that Looked Damaged have been Benefited Corn Yield should be Good. Pasture Fields making Rapid Growth.

With the rains Adams county has been receiving in the past few weeks, crops throughout the county are looking well and fields which a few weeks ago appeared little or no yields, now give indications of providing a fair harvest. This is particularly true of corn fields and the yellow corn crop, in this country with a fair amount of rain for the remainder of the season promises good yields. The sugar corn crop in this county has also been greatly improved although the rains came too late to help some very early fields.

Pasture fields are making rapid growths since the rains. The fields before this were almost bare and since the rains have come, all have taken on a coating of green, which is reflected in fuller milk pails for the farmers.

Late potatoes in Adams county are looking fairly well and a reasonably good crop may be expected. The early potato crop, however, was almost a failure.

Truckers about Gettysburg and especially those growing celery and other crops, maturing in the fall, are thankful for the rain. Many have had their celery already planted and during the dry period were compelled to water it with not too satisfactory results. Watering was also needed for many vegetables and the tender plants have been given a growth which promises to make them strong enough to withstand any extremely hot days which may yet come.

ARRESTED WHILE IN JAIL

Milton Carl Jailed for Board Bill Arrested on another Charge.

Milton Carl, who has been incarcerated in the county jail for some time past awaiting trial for non payment of a board bill at the Elk Horn hotel, Biglerville, and recently charge lodged against him Saturday for treating stock without a veterinarians certificate, was arrested. The arrest was made by Dr. E. D. Hudson on investigation of the Board of Veterinary Medical Examiners. Dr. Hudson received a letter, Saturday, from Dr. W. Sallade, secretary of the board, requesting that he bring action against him in the name of the state board, with the result that a warrant was issued on Monday.

It appears that Carl did a general veterinary practice in and about Bendersville while he was accumulating the board bill for which he was lodged in jail. Certain results followed the operations on several horse's hoofs and attention was directed to him in this manner. He is said to have administered anything without a certificate and has not demanded a hearing on this charge.

MANY APPLICANTS FOR SEALER

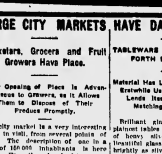
Plenty of Candidates for Sealer of Weights and Measures. County Commissioners Consider Joining Another County in Appointment.

There may be a dearth of applicants for the borough offices but no such condition exists in connection with the county office of Sealer of Weights and Measures. The commissioners of patriotic spirited citizens have been treated with such a rush as to threaten to accept the position provided they are approached in the proper manner. None of the signers of the list as a rule actually tell the county commissioners that they want the job.

According to the provisions of the law the minimum salary should be $600 a year and expenses. Two or more counties may go together in the appointment of one man, thereby dividing the expense, but Adams county is considering the proposition that the commissioners think it doubtful if an applicant could be found to do the work. Both York and Cumberland counties have sufficient population to justify the appointment of a man for each county. In any event they would probably not like to pay more than the minimum salary, so that Adams county's proportion would not be more than $1,046.50. Franklin, $1,758.95; July, 1913, $1,046.50; Adams, $1,046.50. Pay for the salaries of those who have been acting as sealers in the past few years, is apportioned out of the city and county funds in accordance with the equal fee receipts, the city makes a little more than half.

The market opens at four o'clock in the morning, and most of the wholesales sales are made before 6:30, there is an advantage to the producer, because he can get his produce promptly. The wagons are to arrive on the market grounds after midnight.

The fruit and vegetables usually are in excellent condition, for they are picked, and there would be little difficulty in obtaining some choice and vegetables at a reasonable price.



A Typical Huckster Wagon.

tables are sold at retail to small quantities, but as the grocers and hucksters do a small trade, rather than a wholesale business. They buy in bulk, they get most of the business of the city people who have not the time or the inclination to go early in the morning to the market grounds. Then, they go to their grocer by phone and give their orders. They say they'll be down early and go down to the market, even though they have no intention of doing so, but through these means here the consumer gets his fruits and vegetables at a reasonable rate from the middleman.

FITTING A HORSE'S COLLAR

If Worn by Same Animal All the Time It Will Not Injure Itself or Wear.

—Snag But Not Tight.

The collar should fit—be just right in length and width. If it is too long the horse all the time it will slaps it up on the shoulders, but does not overcome a wrong size. It must be snug, but not tight enough to cause sores. The horses must be adjusted to the collar. To do this the hame with the neck is pinched, and the tugs drawn down. This will bring the collar long the tightening of the same strap below causes the hame to be drawn by the pulling joint of the tugs too low down.

Horses' necks differ in shape and it is well to keep the collar with the horse that was fitted to another horse. You will find that it will not fit so well. Work other than your own shoes. Much time is lost in fitting that pulls a load with a misfit collar.

DIFFERENT USES FOR EGGS

Large Quantities Are Used by Cafes Printers, Coffee Roasters and Manufacturing Chemists.

It is said that the cafes printers are more than 40,000,000 dozens of eggs used in the United States for coloring and photographic trades, the cracker and biscuit bakers and the coffee roasting trades consume more than twice as much. Large quantities are also used in the leather trades for tanning, etc. The egg trade is also affected by the preparation of many patent foods and the fancy trade for "new laid" eggs increases the number. For many of these uses to better grades of eggs are used—not because they are better, but because they are dearer. One biscuit company in New York city buys 4,000,000 eggs every week.

Very few pure white eggs are used for the printing trade. Stained eggs, crape de chines and shadow laces are the kinds most in demand. The chinese is still the favorite style, and is so full that it becomes considerably over the retail line.

LARGE CITY MARKETS HAVE DAINTY EFFECT

TABLEWARE OF GLASS SETS FORTH DINNER TABLE.

Material Has Largely Superseded the Erstwhile Use of Heavy Silverware. Lends Itself Particularly to Matching Color Schemes.

Brilliant silverware enhances the plainest tables and makes the absence of flowers hardly noticeable; imported, beautiful glass candlesticks gleam as the light shines through them, and the happy union of beauty and usefulness in glassware makes it the choice. Glass is not more durable than the dainty china, but it will stand as much, withstand hot liquids as well, as it cannot absorb grease.

A heavy cut glass punch bowl earns its keep on the dining room table at night again when hot mulled cider was served in it. Such serviceable glass avoided if the real hazardous are put in the care of the maid. Many of the 1 to 1 set before the let liquids are added. Silver, however, being a conductor of heat, works the best.

All fragile ware will withstand heat if the simple precaution of plasma a teaspoon in the dish, cup or glass is observed.

New tableware shows plain dishes and plates with the edges cut and never been put to before. There are also the flat, round dishes, the centers of this fragile ware that seem very appropriate for the dainty luncheon. Their dainty form-like tracery that harmonizes with the delicate viands.

The new individual salt and celery dishes are also cut glass, and a generous dose of colored glass that may be had to match the color scheme of the dinner. The mahogany framed glass trays are also in the same delicate colors for various affairs.

Plain glassware, however, that is so popular for table decorating, is now manufactured in many colored glass, which are placed the flower holders that fit in the bowls. They also display the brightness of the flowers and their coloring.

The life of these charming table accessories is not long, but they are worth more. The proper method of washing glass and is to wash and rinse hand in one pan and rinsing water of the same temperature as the hand. Then wash in soft cloth and no soap, for soap makes the glass cloudy and dull.

Glass must not drain after rinsing or it will also become cloudy. Dry quickly and polish as soon. Soft lukewarm silk or linen cloths will make glass gleam brightly. If the articles to be cleaned have been left to stand until the dirt is loosened.

Salad bowls, oil cruets, milk glasses and pitchers are troublesome to care for as the oil clings to the glass and to their brilliancy. Wash these first in hot water mixed with ammonia, then clean as usual.

Decanters and water bottles are cleaned with shot and water. This may be removed with lemon juice or vinegar.

APPLYING SOUTACHE BRAID

If the soutache braid is sewed on by hand every other stitch should be a backstitch, making a firmly held outline of the braid. A particularly attractive finish is obtained by sewing the braid on one edge so that it stands up slightly. This may be done by basting by taking a short stitch on the right side and a long stitch on the back.

Corset Bobbins.

A very nice little accessory for the lady who makes her own dresses is a pair of heart-shaped corset sockets.

These are small heart shaped sockets, measuring two by one and one-half inches. They may be sewed on the waist to the top of each heart, so that the corset steels may be inserted in place, and in this position are then tucked lengthwise into the bobbins. The steels in the hearts are then fastened to a bouquet holder underneath the bobbins in order to make a good looking finish. Any color to match the dress could be added.

Odd bits of satin and silk are also used to make these little sachets. A dainty piece of ribbon could also help out pleases the girl who is practicing her trousseau.

New Paving.

Some good brick pavement are made of a fabric known as can fast brick. The manufacturers guarantee that they will withstand the hard wear of heavy traffic. Any new material is shown in the form of a brick, which is made of gravel and blue; also is too tender of the feet. It is a very attractive combination of rose, brown and green.

A Practical Gift.

Her club, composed of five members besides herself, each gave to the bride a beautiful pompon for a shirt. The upper part of the shirt was made of a fine linen lawn, and arranged so that the fromage could be fastened on when it change was desired.

MAKE HOME GROUNDS PRETTY

Some of Most Pleasing Things in Way of Plants, Vines and Shrubs Should be Set in Early Fall.

(By JEANNETTE PERRON.)

Plan for beauty, then work for the plan.

Let your light shine in the back part, that there shall be nothing left undone.

Have grass and shrubbery in the back yard, rather than rubbish.

Some of the prettiest things in the way of plants, vines and shrubs should be set in the early fall, or even now.

Hardy cannas are among our most brilliant, hardy shrubs.

All the roses, herbaceous or shrub, are beautiful and hardy.

Let your kitchen window be a picture frame, but the picture framed from the outside, looking in.

Let the green things be something beside which the vegetables look cockle-burrs.

Plan to screen the ugly views from the back door. Vines will do it.

Get a start of the beautiful crimson from the woods and plant it in the garden.

Set a strong stake beside it, and tie the vine to it, remembering that the "shrub" habit is formed. It is heredity.

The trumpet-creeper will not spread unless you cut its roots. When you do, be sure you won't have to import another.

LATE BLIGHT OF POTATOES

Expert Plant Pathologist of Oregon Agricultural College Gives Advice of Immediate Value.

Since a large part of the potato crop in Adams county this year was destroyed by late blight, the following advice from C. M. Smith, expert plant pathologist at the Oregon Agricultural College, is of immediate value.

"There is no practical treatment for the control of this fungous disease," says Mr. Bailey. "Growers should be on the lookout when the rotting or discolored potatoes are not dug. Most of the infection comes from planted carrying the blight fungus in a dormant condition. Where the infection on tops is moist, warm weather, there is a great opportunity for is to see and that will germinate well. If conditions favorable for the blight later it will be necessary to spray with bordeaux mixture. Anyone should not wait until the fungus has established itself, but be on the force application.

"The fellings should be kept well covered from the time the blossoms appear. In the Willamette valley the early varieties will be killed as soon as the tops die down, but the late varieties those at intervals of about ten days, should be covered with sufficient enough in case of prolonged dry weather. Three or four such applications the 6-6-50 bordeaux.

"I would not wish to arouse against used treatment for the late blight potatoes, however, for we have several years' experience with it and have profited largely in this way. Formulas for the 6-6-50 bordeaux are 6 pounds of blue vitriol enough in case of prolonged dry weather. Three or four such applications the 6-6-50 bordeaux.

HOW TO MAKE FARMING PAY

English farmers have learned that broiler are raised more profitably by millaire to farming. It is a proven fact. English farmers pay as a great deal higher rent than American farmers, but they live better than the latter. The average English tenant farmer has a good orchard to work as which would be brought anything from $1,000 to $5,000 if he were to buy a good farm. With 10 acres of land the English farmer will often employ from two to five men and he has a good comfortable home to live in. He spends most of his time in the open air, and, by raising live stock and selling the products of the land, he can see his brain and therefore has money to hire assists.

LECTURE COURSE AT BIGLERVILLE

Five Entertainments, Including Home Talent Production, Arranged for Coming Season. Maybe Increase in Price for Course Tickets.

Arrangements have been completed by the committee in charge, for the Biglerville Lecture Course season of 1913-14. The program contains five numbers in all, including a home talent performance to be given during the early part of January. The exact date for it has not yet been fixed.

The opening number will be a concert by "The Boston Lyrics," a highly recommended concert company, on Friday evening, October 17th. They will be followed by Dr. Charles Stalie, who will lecture on the evening of November 12th. The next number will be another concert by the English Opera Singers, on January 26. Sometime between this and the closing number, it is planned to have the local talent production. Gilbert A. Eldridge, the noted impersonator, will give the last entertainment for the season, on February 27th.

Last year the course was conducted under the auspices of the Library Association with the idea of applying the proceeds to the betterment of the library; but at the end of the year the committee found there was existing a deficit of over thirty dollars. Part of this has been secured and an effort is being made to clear out the balance as soon as possible.

A Lecture Course Committee, with no connection with the Library, has for this year's entertainments in hand. It is their purpose to apply any funds that may be left, after all bills are settled to the permanent establishment of a lecture course for each winter season. If a profit is made this year it will be used to secure higher priced, which is understood as better, entertainments for next season. It has not been arranged for this year are more expensive than those last winter, and for this reason it is probable that a slight increase in the price of the course tickets.

The personnel of the present committee is: Mrs. E. D. Herring, Misses Myrtle Watkins and Pearle Rice, Amos D. Shively.

MAY MAKE TEST

Confession Continues in some Counties over Local Option Law.

A court test of the constitutionality of the party enrollment act, which has caused so much confusion in various counties of the state, may be undertaken before the primaries on September 16, it was learned here. It is possible that the much-discussed quorum of the constitutional and the no-party-an Judicial and second class city municipal nominations may be also taken up at the same time. As yet there has been no organized effort to contest these laws, but a number of quiries have been made at the capital by people who expect that they could enable doubt about the legality of the two acts. Whether the present construction of election of councilmen under the Clark act in third class cities will be contested is not known.

As far as known, the party enrollment act is being carried out in most of the counties, although its operation was held back by the necessary printing. Vigorous objections to it have been received at some of the state officers from many citizens, but they are informed in reply that the law must be enforced.

With a wave of enthusiasm that was characteristic of the entire meeting, the convention of the Adams County Sabbath School Association, at Biglerville, was brought to a close Friday evening. On account of the inclement weather it was decided not to attempt the parade that had been scheduled for six o'clock in the evening. Preparations had been made by all nearby schools to take part, and it was a great disappointment to them not to have the demonstration. Word was sent out as soon that no effort would be made to parade and the many people who either expected to take part or watch it did not leave their homes.

The rain also kept away many people who were anxious to hear the addresses during the day, but in spite of this the large St. Paul's church building was filled to capacity. During the afternoon session only part of the large audience that had assembled could be accommodated in the church.

JEWEL SEARCH IS ABANDONED

Ashes of Blue Mountain House Are Unproductive to Baltimore Man who Sifts Them. $50,000 Insurance Will be Paid.

All hopes of recovering anything like gold or precious stones from the ruins of the Blue Mountain House, which was destroyed by fire August 5, are blasted. That is the opinion, at least, of Henry Loppheimer, a Baltimore diamond merchant, who has occupied a suite of rooms at the Blue Mountain House with his family for the past twenty years. He spent more than a day hunting through the ashes for some of the five thousand dollars' worth of jewelry belonging to his wife and daughter.

Mr. Loppheimer, who knew the location of the rooms, dug in the ruins underneath this location and sifted several bushels of ashes.

He found charred and partions of his wife's trunk. The hinges, corners pieces and several steel wool constituted the sum of this. An expensive lavallier, containing a number of diamonds set in platinum, the diamonds weighing from four carats down, was found. The chain was fused to the steel, he cans across a button from the coat of his wife's uniform. Underneath his daughter's room, Mr. Loppheimer found a gold lavallier that had evidently been a lamp; two silver canteens, wedged together, and a few pieces of jewelry in the ruined trunk.

The most peculiar find of all was a lump of gold on which could be discerned the initials of Miss Loppheimer. This was found in the bed, on which the spots were plainly seen.

Mr. Loppheimer's loss in jewelry and clothing is about $6,000, on which he had an insurance of $3,000. There were other guests at the hotel who lost equally as much. The ashes, two feet below the floor, are very hot yet. The insurance adjusters met Thursday in Harrisburg, heard the evidence and adjudged the hotel a total loss. The insurance of $50,000 will therefore be paid.

A Practical Wife Hunter

By ESTHER VANDEVEER

Old man Burkes was a eater, if not a miser. He was a widower with one son, Johnny, who was kept so close to him as to constitute many was concerned that he had no idea his father was rich. How should he have when his property was all in government bonds hidden away in a box in the vaults of a savings and investment company? The lay was sent to school till he was fourteen years old, and then kept him.

One day when Johnny was twenty-two years old his father died and the young man was astounded to find himself in possession of securities worth half a million of dollars. From being nothing he owned everyt what he needed for necessities out of $1,000 a year he got $50,000.

Though John was a very plain young man, with not much attention, and entirely unversed in the ways of a gentleman, he had good common sense. He realized early that no matter how rich a man is he cannot live on a million acres sun without injury to himself. He must have something to do to keep his mind occupied. He had been kept at work, and that, as the old song says, "there's no place like home." Acting on these principles, he set himself to the task of making a home for himself and the same quality of sense as himself. One who had been brought up in affluence would be ashamed of him; but Johnny Burkes was looking for property would not shely find herself married to a man who had been brought without loving her head.

But how was he to proceed? He had few, if any, acquaintances with young women. He could not make an advertisement he could scarcely make acquaintance in that way. He could not employ a typewriter masculine gender. He could not employ a woman. Purchasing a horse and wagon he started out to look for a wife, driving from house to house, supposedly looking for lodgings, but really in search for a wife.

The hotels were largely women, and most of these were young. His search of making lodgings was therefore unavailable. True, out of the many he had to visit he found some unsuitable. Many were the seats he was invited to occupy and the cups he sipped for fascinating purposes stemming from what he had to say. He was not a "don't want my typewriter." John could not have found a better one who would be less receptive if she knew that he had a million dollars. He only spend $25,000 a year.

One morning he called at a house where he was received at the door by a young woman who invited him to come to him kindly:

"I would be glad to hear a typewriter of you for two reasons. In the first place I could make money and I would one, and, in the second, I always sympathize with those who are compelled to make their living by canvassing. I have never been it would be hard for me to do that kind of work, and I can understand how hard it must be for you."

"That's the first bit of sympathy I've got since I began my search," thought the young man as he came in and rose a few minutes? I've got to find a girl who can feel that way about canvassing."

"Certainly. Come in." The door opened and he saw a living room and, disappearing, returned with some papers and samples of which he showed pleased. "You look hungry," she said. "I'm afraid you've had no breakfast to-day."

He offered to sell the girl a typewriter on easy terms, telling her at the same time that he was married and in his commission down. It was this that he got his start. He thought that this could get work if she had the money to buy one, but that she was not afraid were all notes, so cash. She was sure she could get work, and would make something besides.

John spent much money on the notes himself, and they were all paid when due. He found her very helpful when making his collections, and in this way he got to know her well during the two. A true-vane when John told her that he was looking for a wife and then at his first visit to her and thought that he would like her for one. He would help him build it up. The girl told him that she was not looking out concerning about him. He was, however, methodical in his way and made her references, taking care to inquire concerning her as to her fitness as a wife as to her ability to do typewriting about his money.

The young woman on receipt of the testimonials that John Burton had given her, accepted his proposal to help him build a home, combining her business with his own. Before Miss Marriage John confessed to her how he had looked for a wife on his profession and left her to order what he needed for the house, as he left all this sent to him.

Mr. and Mrs. John Burton spend the one-tenth of their income and grow rich. They have a home that is considered an excellent medium for charity purposes.

INSPIRED BY CHARGER

RIDERLESS HORSE SHAMED THE RETREATING SOLDIERS.

'Riffel Whistle Stallion, After the Odd, and Most Fatigue, Went On, as He Would Have, to Victory or Death.

Three hundred yards from the spot the infantry, struggling valiantly, caught the colored sergeant in the forehead, and he tumbled from the saddle. A horse ery went up from the dismounting men, and the whole white horse plunged wildly, ran off, and disappeared in the dust and smoke. The trenches broke into yells and their fire redoubled. The enlisted men slowed; their long lines wavered, hesitated, and broke.

From the other side of the river, the infantry, struggling valiantly, saw the plucky making of the enemy's defeat. The dust and smoke of the guns—are the colored troops—hesitated, and then began to scatter. The sweat poured down the gunners' faces, and they fired blindly, from the scattering troops of the enemy. Then, from the confusing cloud, broke the big white horse, with the colored sergeant lying pitifully against his white mane. The animal was not wounded, and he had went up, his mane shook out, his head lifted, and he scented battle in the trenches.

Across the river, the infantry broke; the gunners stuck their heads down from guides and shooting. Then they, too, stopped, and wiped their eyes. Something seemed to catch the attention of the men. Every head was streamed down his cheek that was not wiped away by the sleeve of his blouse.

The white horse had gone twenty yards when the sergeant, who had only his long black hair in the air. The sergeant's head was down, his body was bent down like receiving blows on the back of the firing seemed the commander of the troops. The white horse, with single shining figure turned and speed back toward the enemy. The sergeant followed, a line yelled, and plunged after the horse. The enemy, seeing the horse coming, fled. The sergeant, on the ground, the white horse with one leap cleared the trenches and the sergeant. Without word spoken, the men followed, and the enemy fled. The horse, plunged headlong into the enemy's camp, and the sergeant, with a yell, followed. The enemy fled. The horse was suddenly lighted by a thousand lights, and the sergeant fainted.

"Patrons should enclose coins in an envelope, wrap them securely in paper or deposit them in a coin holding receptacle which can be easily and quickly taken from boxes, and carriers will be required to lift such coins and, without unnecessary delay, deal dispatch, attach the requisite stamps."

REMARKABLE NERVE

Arm Shot Off, Walks Two Miles, Gun Fell and Exploded.

With his arm shattered by a load from a shotgun fired at short range, Harry Jennings, a 15 year old son of Mrs. Walter Jennings, near Burkittsville, walked two miles to his home and then to the office of Frederick City Hospital. Once at the hospital the surgeons were amazed to find that his arm, but the young man steadfastly refused to be put to sleep, and only after being at the institution for nearly two days, did he see that all hope of saving the arm was useless and consented to the removal of the arm which was done.

Young Jennings in company with Harry Snook and Clifford Smith, all near Burkittsville, were hunting in the mountains on Monday evening. After hunting for some time they sat down and young Jennings sat upon a large stone with a shotgun in his hand. In some manner the gun slipped from his hands and grazed the large rock top. The jarring caused the trigger to draw and discharge the gun.

The load struck young Jennings in the arm, just below the elbow. The large bone of the arm was shattered, fragments of it being blown about the scene, and the flesh of the arm was horribly torn. The wound began bleeding profusely, but his companions realized that if something was not done quickly young Jennings would bleed to death. A tourniquet was made by taking pieces of their clothing and the flow of blood was arrested.

CHILDREN WITH MATCHES

Start Blaze in McSherrystown Stable. Led Downstream.

A slight fire occurred at the stable of F. X. Weaver, McSherrystown, Tuesday afternoon. The flames, however, were extinguished before any headway had been made. The fire is supposed to have been started by several children playing with matches.

William Weaver, Jr., Weaver, Chief of the Hanover fire department, who was engaged in the construction of a building nearby, saw the smoke and hastened to the scene. There he found a boy of about eight years of age, who said his brother was penned in the building with him. When Mr. Cook opened the door, he found the little fellow on the bales and without assistance from the smoke.

Members of the fire company responded to an alarm, but the employes of the cigar box factory, nearby, put out the blaze before the apparatus arrived. The only damage done was the burning of some hay and straw in the shed.

LIND RETURNS TO MEXICAN CAPITAL

Message From Gamboa Gives the Outlook.

U. S. WILL NOT RECEDE

Provisional President's Request to Regarded as Concession in Washington.

Vera Cruz, Mex., Aug. 28. — John Lind, the special representative of President Wilson, has returned to Vera Cruz to the capital at once.

This action is due to the latest note from Senor Gamboa, the Mexican minister of foreign affairs. This note is considered to mean that the Mexican provisional government is willing to at least consider the proposal that Lind go to Mexico City. In his discussions with the Mexican officials Lind is said to have declared that the United States government would not recede from the position it has taken in the matter of the recognition of Huerta as a candidate for the presidency of Mexico.

After a conference with Secretary Bryan and Counselor Lansing Lind left the senate foreign relations committee. President Wilson, it is said, believes he believed things were changing in Mexico City and that a settlement of affairs soon would be known.

There was also known that the Huerta government had agreed to the plan of Lind to have Huerta leave the disposition of the Mexican administration in which case the United States has encouraged the belief in official circles that the Mexican government is having a good general effect in Mexico. This plan was approved by the Foreign Minister Gamboa's reply to Lind's communication, made public in Mexico City.

The plan has been voiced by the Huerta government telegraphed all its agents to embargo all shipments of arms to Vera Cruz, presumably for the constabulary. A large shipment waiting at Juan Tuxpan, 200 miles north of Vera Cruz, on which already had been at certainly.

Guadalupe, was to be shipped at Vera Cruz Monday night, which was prevented by the fall of Huerta on Tuesday till Wednesday. The fact that the text of Wilson's message, had not been made public in Mexico City, although it was given out in full in Mexico City, Huerta's suppression of the news is considered.

Gamboa's note, sent to Lind at Vera Cruz Monday night, which was received by the latter early Tuesday till Wednesday, is a statement of the President

...COME TAX RAISE FAILS

Progressives Lose Fight to Amend Tariff Bill.

...NT AT BIG FORTUNES

Washington, Apr. —Attempts to increase the limit of the proposed income tax, on the ex ir incomes, failed in the senate, when Senators Borah, Bristow and Cummins led an effort to amend the Aldrich income tax rates of the Democratic tariff bill.

Senator Borah offered an amendment increasing the graduated tax on larger incomes until it would have reached five per cent on those above $100,000 a year.

The Democrats, aided by ten Republicans, defeated the amendment, 43 to 17.

A more radical provision, with a maximum tax of ten per cent on incomes of $1,000,000 or more, will be submitted by Senator Bristow.

In the pending bill the rates on larger incomes are:

One per cent on incomes from $20,000 to $50,000; two per cent from $50,000 to $100,000, and three per cent above $100,000.

Senator Borah proposed the following "additional tax:"

One per cent on incomes from $50,000 to $100,000; two per cent from $100,000 to $250,000; three per cent from $250,000 to $500,000; four per cent from $500,000 to $1,000,000, and five per cent above $1,000,000.

The Democratic leaders boldly assisted the increase, and were joined by Senators Clark, of Wyoming; Gallinger, Lippitt, Lodge, Page, Penrose, Smoot, Warren and Weeks from the Republican side.

The senate received the income tax section of the tariff bill unexpectedly after finishing the first reading of all of the tariff schedules. It is said that the debate is expected to continue for a day or two.

The demand for an increase of the tax on the higher incomes was accompanied by the declaration that men with large incomes would not suffer just share of the taxes under the new bill.

"The man with the small income always pays his tax more completely," said Senator Borah, "than does the man with the larger income. It is much easier to find all the $10,000 income than to find all of the $50,000 income. A tax of five or five per cent on the man with $100,000 will not inconvenience him, since the ten per cent tax will inconvenience the man with $50,000."

Senator Williams, who had charge of the income tax provision for the Democratic side, insisted that the committee had framed the schedule to go slowly and cautiously in inaugurating the new form of direct taxation.

"We thought it well now to establish the tax on the simple grounds," he said. "Experience alone will show how it will work, and the changes that may be necessary in it to the future the American people will have revenue natives here who will revise and perfect the tax."

Senator Root said the plan to tax the conditions of wills and grants of all corporations or partnerships would be unconstitutional of administration. He insisted that these undivided profits were part of a stockholder's capital and not his income.

UNPREPARED FOR WAR, SAY ARMY OFFICERS

Conditions of 68 Years Ago Said to Exist Now.

Washington, Aug. —Sixty-eight years after the end of the civil war, suffering from the same unpreparedness that Lieutenant General George Gordon Meade complained of at the outbreak of the Spanish war, the United States army is in the same condition today as it was then, according to army officers.

"The army of the United States is wholly unprepared for war," said Major General W. W. Wotherspoon, assistant chief of staff of the army. "The army is in the same condition today as it has been since the time of Washington. Investigation of the records just published by the war dept. of the Mexican war and the Civil War and the Spanish-American war, clearly show that in time of need this terrible unpreparedness always has outshone other things of the times.

"This is not a military nation. What little militarism it did have it has set aside for commercialism and politics. When the last vestige of militarism disappears from the nation the nation is in for very serious trouble.

"Our army is the smallest of any first class power in the world today. We have a paltry force near the Mexican border, and there are two only a dozen men of any other nationality. In all our wars we have had unprepared, undisciplined guerilla angel has hovered over us. Next time we may not have such luck, and then there will be a repugnant awakening.

"General Meade said we were unprepared before the Mexican war of 1845. The same statement would be true of our condition today. PLAY FATAL TO HANOVER YOUTH

Trifling with Charged Wires Results in Instant Death to Young Mr. Bechtel. Father also Shocked by Electricity

A playful prank of Thomas Bechtel, the eighteen year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bechtel, of Hanover, resulted in his death from electrocution about 7:30 o'clock Sunday evening.

The young man, who was employed as a bobbin-winder, at the Hanover Wire Cloth Factory, ripped on a vacation, using some of the thin screen wire from the factory. He fastened one end of it to the iron railing in front of the rear porch. He then continued the wire over the fence, intending to tap his companions on the pavement. Later he wound the wire around a trolley pole in front of the house, fastening it to a spike in the pole. On the end he tied a stone, and cast it over the trolley wire. The stone hung just high enough to strike the floor, if it came along.

His mother, mother and several brothers were seated in the front porch at the time, watching the lad. When the two ends touched, sparks were emitted from the pole around which the wire was wound. Bechtel's father then went to the pole and with his knife he cut the wire. As he did so he received a severe shock, which made his hand and arm stiff. The knife had a wooden handle, which probably saved Mr. Bechtel from serious, perhaps fatal, injury. The release of the wire running to the porch, but it was still wound around the spike in the pole.

It was then that the young man received the shock which resulted in his death, as he thoughtlessly took hold of the wire with his hand and no relief issue it, when a circuit was formed. And he received a shock which caused his instant death. He fell on his back, a few feet from where he stood, dead. The trolley wire, which runs through the town, is always charged at 6,000 volts.

Dr. H. M. Alleman was hastily summoned and he applied every means possible for restoring life, but without avail.

The youth was aged eighteen years, two months and four days, and is survived by his parents, two sisters and four brothers, all at home.

Widow of Howard Miller, Married since his Tragic Death, Refuses to Sign Petition for William Eyler's Release. Her Story.

In spite of vigorous efforts to secure the signature of Mrs. Samuel Myers to the petition asking the pardon of William Eyler, convicted murderer, who will respond to requests, and the papers were circulated by friends of Eyler, Mrs. Miller to released from the Eastern Penitentiary on or before the Pardon Board without the name of the murdered man's widow.

"I will not sign what had his just deserved. Had he not would have been hanged. They have been trying to stop this paper asking his release but I will not sign it. They have not stated that because I have since married Mr. Myers that I have forgotten my first husband. I have not, and I do not want any injustice done him. My husband was a hard working man when he was not drunk with him. He was no companion when he drank. He was kind to me and my friends, not knowing Eyler was after him, when he was struck."

Mrs. Miller says that had the affair was not a bar-room brawl. It did start in the bar-room, however, Miller following in the lobby of the hotel.

Some time before the fight there had been a horse sale in Emmitsburg. A carload of western horses had been offered for sale. Miller was a horseman, farmer and did a little trading in horses himself. He had been looking at of the less promising looking brandings.

William (Bill) Long, a brother-in-law of Eyler, bought a splendid looking horse at the sale. Long, Eyler and Miller were drinking in the bar-room of the hotel when Miller broke in on the party. He was accompanied by four friends, there was a fight during which Miller broke Long's nose. Eyler came to the rescue of his brother-in-law and struck Miller, but ought him a blow with the pump handle, taking Miller with the sledge. The blow in the head proved fatal.

ABOUT SPRUCE RUN

Spruce gum, which is relished by many people above ore other kind, is a product of the red spruce tree found chiefly in Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont. The natives say the best, though abundance in the dark swampy regions of the north and sometimes reaches in the bark due to the wounds flowing after the excessive cold of winter. This sap, when allowed to be exposed by the tree for the purpose of gathering up the gum, soon dries up and a scratch in color when it first appears, but in the subsequent cold of the first winter, it becomes harder and darker and more brittle. The time to get it is before to turn red, when it is at its best, and before the cold weather. Those who make a business of gather-ing spruce gum usually begin with the season of each spring going about in the woods and examining the trees so as to make sure of finding the gum in good condition when the time comes for collecting it. Where a tree is found to be yielding a thrifty tree is a point well marked in the memory and noted in the woodsman and making deep notches in the bark of the tree. The gum is in fact a gum gather will gather from 100 to 200 pounds in a day under favorable conditions, the average being from 50 to 100 pounds. It is said that the gum is cleaned it attains about one-fifth its original bulk, and that it sells for $1.50 a pound. Bangor, Me., is the chief market for the gum, the best of which of it are shipped from there to Boston.

THE REASON FOR IT

The nation is united for a reason for the unusually heavy disruption of apples. The crop is a failure generally in many of the northern states. While apples will be plentiful in some sections it will not be general and famous orchards of the country will have only a few scattering bushels to be due to an unfavorable season. It is not the first time to adjust the amount of fruit to the demand, but the natural regulation and commitment available for the purpose is unusual this year. The reason for the June drop is this process working on a large scale. Nature usually produces many number of apples which not all can mature. The drop which takes place is followed this and seems directly to be the proximity and immunity but another crop is provided and this during the month in say event, most of the apples that will mature. They ought to bring to maturity under normal conditions.

A GOOD IDEA.

The boys state agricultural college is planning to have a corn show in connection of the apple growers of the state by acting to the capacity of a large tent. The corn show is a good idea. It will not buy, sell or handle apples but will be for the purpose to get the growers into connection with prospective buyers. Many apple growers have not corn those who have fruit to sell. The apple grower is the best man in the world to replace with the clearing house, but he does not know enough about the field, varieties, quality of fruit and how to handle it to get the best results. The corn show will bring the apple grower in touch primary and this is the idea. It is a step in the right direction of how to where and with whom one trees to deal. It will be a kind of annually kindness, sympathy and helpfulness.

FIGHTING BUD WEEVILS.

Professor Wilson, of the bee-culture of the college, has made a study of the cotton boll weevil, reports four varieties of insects which do a good deal of damage to young fruit spikes. He says the weevil does not oviposit the young trees with excrescence of food and does not destroy the fruit. It is only after the shedding of the trees in the early of the day and ovipositing the punctures for a small distance with a piece of chitin resembling the thorn or a compassion smaller in that on the honeysuckle vine. The larva is born an wingless and get caught in the sticky fluid and in that attempt is crawl back into the trees

THE MILKING MACHINE.

While the milking machine has not been brought to a condition of perfection, progress has been made in the last five years. The first step in the improvement station has lately announced the result of a milking machine experiment covering a period of four years. In this it was found that including the time required to get the machine ready for use and cleaning it after the operation was completed, milking it required on the average 8.86 minutes per cow as against seven minutes for doing the job by hand. It would have been interesting had the same experiment been given two of the cost of doing the work by the two methods.

Years ago, before the Bell Telephone was stretched up and down the roads and the humming wires bound farm to farm and city to countryside, there was no way to call a doctor in a hurry.

Busy summer days, bad roads, the storms in winter—all prevented the frequent neighborly visits that make country life so enjoyable.

To-day it's different. The farmer's wife who has a Bell Telephone "visits" as often as she chooses. The telephone has made this possible.

BOY SCOUTS TO ENCAMP HERE

Troop from Washington Coming on Two Hundred Mile Hike. Will Spend Several Days Camping in William Johns Field.

Fifteen boys representing several nationalities will arrive in Gettysburg Saturday on a two hundred mile hike from Washington to Gettysburg and return. While here they will camp at the field of William H. Johns at the southwestern edge of town. They carry two rucksacks each and have a large wagon containing their equipment.

The boys are the members of Troop 97 Boy Scouts of America connected with the Gospel Mission in Washington, with which Mrs. H. E. Monroe, well known in Gettysburg, is actively connected. It is known as one of the greatest institutions for good in the Capital City.

Captain James B Graham commands the troop which will be encamped on the Johns Field for three or four days. The boys depend largely on the hospitality of the towns while they visit for their rations and the following stores in Gettysburg will be receiving orders for supplies which the local people care to donate toward their noon and their gun point times while here, G. S. Diller, William Eden, Getz Frederick, Harper's Ferry, and Einsminger. Saturday the Scouts will go by Chambersburg, Greencastle, Waynesboro, Hagerstown and Williamsport.

An exceptionally interesting feature of the Scouts' stay here will be a special service in St. James Lutheran church Sunday evening when the boys will sing illustrated songs and an illustrated lecture on "Scouts Work in the Underworld" will be delivered by Herbert M. Hilton, superintendent of the Gospel Mission. Mr. Kline has delivered his address at every town where the Scouts stopped over night.

This lecture commences with an East River (New York) scene over forty years ago, with a graphic description of the life and habits of Jerry McAuley and the denizens of the underworld of the great East-side, the conversion of this remarkable man and the subsequent opening of the Rescue Work, with its marvelous growth and achievements in the past forty years—some of the most incomprehensible scenes of missionary consecration. The work of the Bowery Mission, with its pathetic "Bread Line", and the life and testimony of S. H. Hadley and Col. H. H. Hadley, the peerless leaders of this great work among unfortunates; the story of Delia, or "Saved by a Pink Rose," a thrilling drama of Rescue Work among the white slaves to vicious haste of sin.

FORMER RESIDENT LOSES IN BLAZE

Paul Spangler One of Many Losers in Fire which Threatened to Destroy Newville. Carlisle Truck to the Rescue.

The general store and stock of Paul Spangler in Newville were severely damaged by water during a fire which burned out fourteen buildings and destroyed $50,000 worth of property on Thursday afternoon. Mr. Spangler has many friends here who will sympathize with him in the loss, which for a time threatened to destroy the entire business section of the main square of the residence of Rev. and Mrs. George N. Lauffer. Four men were slightly injured during the course of the fire.

Starting with a spurt of flame and a cloud of smoke from the stable of Mrs. Jennie Davidson, it ate its way through the buildings so rapidly that the entire block began one wide sheet of burned hid it not been for the timely arrival of the motor truck of the Union Fire Company at Carlisle.

Fourteen buildings were burned in the fire, the largest structure being the implement house of C. M. Miller, and extending from the alley to Main Street. The other buildings were a series of dwellings.

The blaze was first discovered by Burgess Brandt, who turned in the alarm. Many feared that the two little chemical engines—the makeup of the Newville fire department.

After their arrival at the fire, it was seen that they were no match for it, cope with the situation, and they asked Carlisle for aid. One of the chemicals in the truck got out of order and did wrong shortly after the company had started and that is known as the blaze.

The Union Fire Company is demonstrating with a new auto truck, and Demonstrator Ruggles, of Elmira, N. Y., took things in his own hands, and took out the truck for a record run to Newville. It saved the town.

The property was owned by Isaac Bell Company, stock to their posts in the seatings during the fire and the goods in the windows of the stores were poured at them during the hour that the blaze was at its height. They stood in six inches of water while the flames were leaping at the building. They were relieved then and two men put on the job. They were Miss Martha Brandebaugh and Miss Margaret Bowers.

TEACHERS ORGANIZE

The teachers of Biglerville and Butler township organized during the recess at the annual teachers' meeting. The officers elected for the year, president, Milford Hauer; vice president, Floyd Slaybaugh, secretary, E. Alice Longsdorf; treasurer, Maude Taylor.

The president appointed Robert Fisher, Pearle Rice and Bess Heffenberger to serve on the executive committee. It was decided to hold the first meeting at Clear Spring on September 17th. It was also decided to change to some extent the manner of conducting the meetings by having the program made up entirely of work by the teachers and discussions. It was found that the meetings were becoming school entertainments instead of meetings for the benefit of teachers and patrons. It was for this reason the change was proposed.

DARKNESS ENDS UNION PICNIC

Electric Lights Go out and Scores of Gettysburg People Have Unpleasant Experience. Mr. Turner Makes Statement.

Several hundred persons suddenly found themselves in absolute darkness in Rosensteel's grove, Thursday night when the Sunday School picnic of the Union Sunday School ordered the withdrawal of the current at the local power park. General confusion and disappointment was the result.

Automobiles were pressed into service and the big picnic of Mrs. Alice Tanney and B. W. Hummer were routed at the center together with several other large cars and, after an hour or more of hurry trips, returned to town back to town. From twenty to thirty came in with every truck, all the passengers possessing little of the picnic spirit by the time they reached town. A number of children were among those caught in the darkness and the misfortune was an unpleasant ending for what would otherwise have been a highly successful picnic.

T. F. Turner, manager of the local power plant, and following computers, were asked concerning the matter next morning, and stated that the trouble was about the whole affair and when told of the inconvenience to the picnickers expressed sincere regret over the occurrence. After conferring with the men in charge of the plant during the evening he made this statement.

"The trouble was our service at eight o'clock, our usual time, and shut down the engines, cutting out the power. Before doing this we sent cars to from the Hill brought a total of four people, showing that there was no desire for car service. We received no requests for light even though we there is a telephone at Round Top which connects directly with our plant by which we have frequently been asked for lights on other occasions. It would have required the mere request to secure the light.

"The thought of any affair happening such as that which you mention never occurred to me and I truly regret that it has taken place. We have followed our usual custom of shutting off power at eight o'clock since there was no demand for service. The inference, which I understand has been drawn by some people, that the condition arose on account of spite work following our withdrawal of patronage when no concession was made in fares, is absolutely unfounded."

The picnic itself was a success according to all who enjoyed it. In the afternoon married men and single men fought for supremacy on the base ball field but no decisive score was kept and there were but three married men in the contest which proved that not much was at stake. The little ones had a fine time and the older people enjoyed the band music. Attendance was good and the annual event fully up to the expectations of the people who attended.

Rev. and Mrs. N. S. Wolf, who have spent the last month with friends in and about town, have returned to their home in Reading.

BOARD RELEASES A NEW TEACHER

Miss Day, Elected to Teach Domestic Science in High School, Desires Time for More Study and is Released from Contract.

Miss Helen Day, elected teacher of domestic science and allied branches in the Gettysburg High School, tendered her resignation to the local School Board at the regular monthly meeting on Thursday evening. She was released from her contract and efforts will now be made to secure some one to fill the vacancy.

Miss Day was selected by the Board after a careful inspection of her work in the schools near Baltimore by a committee of members from the Parent-Teachers' Association. They were so much pleased with the results she secured in Maryland that they were quick to recommend her to the Gettysburg directors and her election and acceptance followed.

It now develops, however, that Miss Day wishes to devote the present year to more study instead of teaching and, upon her request, she was released. There are now two vacancies in the High School faculty, the withdrawal of William Day as instructor of manual training causing that position also to remain open.

At the meeting of the School Board it was reported that the congestion in a number of the schools had been relieved. Through the installation of more desks and the shifting from one room to another of scores pupils all will have been given accommodations. The condition of crowded rooms will continue the directorate for next year and steps looking toward better facilities will doubtless be taken during this term.

The tax duplicates for this year were presented and accepted. Revenue from taxes appears in the duplicates, should amount to $11,726.67 in the general fund and to $1424.66 in the building fund.

COUNTY MEETING

Officers Elected and Heads of Committees are Named.

A county meeting of the Senior Loyal Temperance Legion was held at the home of Miss Mary E. Griest, Guernsey, on Thursday evening, where a very pleasant time was spent. The business was first disposed of, under which name the regular election of officers, resulting as follows:

President, Mark E. Eckert; Vice Presidents, Miss Alice L. Black; Secretary, Miss Ella Clepper; Treasurer, Miss Lily Daugherty.

These department superintendents were appointed, Flower Mission, Mrs. Fred Troxel; Mercy, Miss Alice L. Black; Press, Miss Edith Pasco; Social, Miss Anna Hollebaugh; Railroad, Mark E. Eckert; Sabbath Observance, Miss Bertha Heighes; Contest, Miss Grace Sachs; Anti-Narcotic, Miss Mary Christian Clinefelter; Arthur Gosz.

It was also decided that persons might be members of the County organization on the same basis as of Local and State, that is by paying dues and signing the pledge, even without a local organization.

The literary part of the program consisted of a reading by Mrs. F. G. Michener, a short report of the Convention by Miss Anna Michener, and the reading of Mrs. Preston's letter by Miss Esther Peters.

NO NOISY CAPS

College Freshmen this Year will Have Better Headgear than Last.

Local persons usually take considerable pleasure in the fact of any paper scribed for war by the college Freshmen. Last year's headgear of green, yellow and red has not been forgotten. The upper classmen have decided not to attempt a monopoly in that feature and this year the new students will wear dark navy blue caps with an orange button. They will be compelled to wear the cap for the entire year, though the button may be discarded if their teams win two victories over the Sophomores.

Charles H. Wilson, Heber Miller and James McDowell returned this morning from the State firemen's convention at Chester.

FIREMEN MARCH IN GREAT PARADE

Gettysburg's firemen who participated in the big parade at Chester, Thursday afternoon suffered severely from the heat and, with many others from various parts of the State, were compelled to drop out of line before the entire route had been covered.

The line of march was seven miles in length and this did not include several countermarches which the parade was forced to make on the streets of the oldest town in Pennsylvania. The usual loss in forming the immense parade in which 8000 men took part was reported and Gettysburg's fire ladies were put to a rather severe test.

Twenty eight of them, in their light brown uniforms, started with the paraders and were placed with the Columbus' Band in the fourth division with companies from Chester, Philadelphia, Oxford, Lebanon, Harrisburg, Royersford, Columbia, Downingtown and Bridgeport. So severe was the heat that residents of Chester handed out ice water and lemonade to the firemen as they marched and ice cream wedges and other refreshing cones to the paraders.

Gettysburg's representatives got plenty of applause during the line and made a very creditable showing. All who attended the festivities of the week report a fine time and they are already looking forward to next year's four, much pleased with their outing.

Next year's convention will take place in Harrisburg and the Gettysburg boys are already talking of plans for securing a large representation in 1914.

THROWN FROM BUGGY

Mr. and Mrs. Latther Sleets Hurt in Driving Accident.

Springs eleven was the scene of an ugly driving accident Thursday evening about nine o'clock when the team driven by Mr. and Mrs. L. M. Sleets overturned at the Meade School building. The horses became frightened and badly bruising them as well as injuring the horse and scratching the buggy.

The street is narrowed somewhat at this point by a low pile of gravel and stone from the repairs which are being made to the concrete road. The driver, where is flows under the lawn at the school building. Here there has a very spirited animal and, when another team tried to pass him as he was

GET PEPPERMINT BUT STRONG

Silkworth Man Was Not to Be Convinced That His Head Really Should Have Nothing.

At a certain northern Chautauqua gathering last summer a lecturer, at the opening of his address, came to the front of the platform and took a small vial from his pocket.

"My friends," he said, "before I begin my address I wish to let the vermillion of this auditorium. I am going to pour out this vial of peppermint. When the odor reaches you, raise your hands, so that I may see how rapidly it travels."

He emptied the vial, and almost instantly several hands on the front benches went up, then farther back the hands began to go up by the thousands, and at last the people in the last seats caught the odor, and noticed their hands.

The lecturer thanked his audience, and went on with his address. When he had almost finished, and was speaking of the error of the Immutation on the ear senses, he paused, and said with a smile that it was past hour and he had poured out of his vial.

The audience had been caught so neatly that even those who had held up their hands joined in the laugh. But one illiterate fellow, whose hand had gone more promptly and emphatically than any other, did not quite understand.

"When they laughin' at?" he asked, audibly, of the man sitting beside him.

"Why," explained the man, "you did not smell nothin' at all, it was merely instruction."

"Huh!" said the other, "I knowed it was somethin' that smelled mighty strong."—Youth's Companion.

LITTLE KNOWN OF HEREDITY

Much Talk on the Subject, But World Still Awaits a Satisfactory Explanation.

There are few subjects on which so much knowledge nonsense is talked and written as on heredity. Not very much is known of it as yet. Professor Pluis, less of animals, and almost nothing at human beings, writes Prof. H. Fielding-Hall in the Atlantic. The real books on heredity, especially those of the Eugenic society, is to read a mass of observations and hazardous deductions where most of the facts are negative and only the exceptions are positive. The very meaning of "acquired" is not understood. If any quality is truly hereditary, than it is always hereditary. It never comes and goes as the results of heredity, and it is impossible, so far as we say, it is wholly follows. But there is no quality of which this can be said. That quality which is hereditary is known. Even talent is not. No two any qualities are alike. Everyone who once wants to be a soldier or an artist than a lawyer is misunderstanding the environment, and it is so with most professions. The exceptions seem to be due to training and influence, not to any hereditary transmission. The superficial likeness to parents seems hereditary, but in all that we can assert, and that outward likeness by no means includes mental and likeness. There is nothing to attribute to hereditary what is due to training or want of training. It causes suppleness in governments and nations.

Without Food Twenty-eight Days.

A remarkable feat of involuntary fasting was made 13 years ago and by a corporal in a regiment of French colonial infantry on his way to work one morning a man heard cries proceeding from a disused mine, near Brest. At the bottom of an excavation that nearly 100 feet deep Corporal Andre Duerats was found in so weak a condition that he could barely articulate a word. When he recovered his senses he learned that, after accidentally falling into the mine, Duerats had been imprisoned for twenty-eight days without anything to eat or drink. But a fly came to a man. Dr. M. D. Carpenter in his Manual of Physiology records that a fly weighing 12 grains was astonished by the fall of a portion of the cliffs of Dover; it was shut up 160 days later, and found to be still alive, but reduced in weight to 6 grains.

Of Course.

A New York dramatic writer tells of an actress of recent popularity who is just beginning to be obsessed with the notion that the public holds her to be older than she really is.

The writer was assigned to interview this player. He wished to obtain her views with reference to the state of the drama, a topic whereon the actress did not seem particularly anxious to decast.

"It does not matter to me," gently suggested the interviewer, with a smile, "that I am really ascertaining your opinion. You ought to be frank, since your age is sure to—and—"

"Presumively so, my dear boy; presumively so," the actress hastened to assure him.—Judge.

The Spider and the Fly

By WILLIS BEACH POTTER

Mrs. Brindsley was calling upon Mrs. Stevens and was interesting the fact that her son instead of marrying and settling down was spending his time with questionable associates and indefinitely the money also.

"If I could only get him tied up to some good woman for her to become a necessity to him it would change him.

"I wish I could help you," said her friend.

"You can. I have an idea that I have never seen you at a ball. I will go away, and you and Ethel come to my house and take care of the baby my absence. The servants will be there and will need looking after. Besides, there's Zip, our little dog, and Spot, the puppy, to look after. Some other one or the other to any expert I am who understands dogs and does. I will go to Florida for a few months, and by the time I return I shall expect Ralph and Ethel to have become engaged. I will see to it that he is thrown on your especial of a society function."

Mrs. Stevens very much liked such a scheme. It would be a delightful work to throw the two together. What her son's conduct was no concern of Mrs. Stevens. She knew that the girl was just the quiet, domestic sort of woman to make a husband contented to linger over.

Mrs. Brindsley left for Florida and Mrs. Stevens and Ethel at once took charge of the house and the dog during her absence.

For a few days after his mother's departure Ralph didn't appear at home at all. Then one evening he came home to replenish his wardrobe from a trunk that had been sent to his mother's house. Ethel had nothing to do with the conspiracy against his liberty, but being a young girl and he the son of a young fellow, she took the same natural repulsion between them as between the cat and the dog. She heard him come in, go to his room and then to the library, and then all was still. The library was on one side of the hall and the parlor on the other. Ethel had taken position in the library, and when she heard Ralph coming down the hall started across the hall to go into the parlor, and they met in the middle of the room.

Ethel was thinking of his mother's friends had not been very civil. He was thinking that a girl like Ethel was neither an actress nor a chorus girl, and that she was very pretty. Seeing a very pretty young lady, he considered it his duty to be entertaining to her, so he bid her good morning and asked her if she knew when his mother was coming home. Ethel was comforted and asked if he would not like to see the dog. Then Ethel had prepared a list of things to entertain him during his absence, but the contents upon which she needed in consultation. She had no idea that any time she would like to submit them to Ralph. She therefore left the room without repeating to herself the couplet:

"Will you walk into my parlor?" said the spider to the fly;
"'Tis the prettiest little parlor that ever you did spy.

There is no necessity; indeed, it would be trespassing for us to follow Ethel and Ralph to the parlor. Suffice to say that the gentleman was pleased with the young girl, the moment that had him in thrall by prowess during the absence of his mother. Left under the same roof with him, greater than Ralph's natural inclination, leaving him to a late supper at home to be with Ethel and Spot and with the instead of his boon companions. The young man found that the other women were ready to return his wee quite ready to be entertaining.

Ethel, however, was by no means ready to return his advances. She knew she was quite sure she had not. She knew that she was a poor girl and her mother removed to their own sheds in Kingsbridge, and that Ralph moved in clubs and chorus girls. But her mother, on account of the position of clerk at one of the leading hotels in the week at home with her daughter, and Ralph was very excited and being anxious in return to her own domicile where Ethel was at that she was as well come home.

Ethel was glad to have her mother with her, for the girl had become a necessity to Brindsley's peace of mind. She was incapable of seeing her again after she left his house. Ralph was a very handsome young man, and the others were not to leave it for a short months.

Mrs. Brindsley had come in with Ralph's trunk and was standing in the parlor. Zip, the dog, was jumping up at her and barking, and Spot, the parrot, was hooping about in his cage and screaming away with a noise that something important had happened in the household.

"Clerky," said Spot. "Gimme a kiss and I'll tell you a secret."

The spider had put the fly in her net, but the parrot and shut the door on him. Ethel saw her advantage and didn't even blush. Mrs. Brindsley stood as an open mouthed fly for information. Ralph, despite his fondness for so much of a man to put a girl to get apparent position.

"Mother," he said, "Miss Stevens has been very good to me. I am in hopes she will be my wife."

And she fainted his hope.

Look after all details.

Watch all farm implements.

Experience is a valuable asset.

Let the poultry have a share of the sour milk.

It is no raisin to keep poultry than any other stock.

In housing the little chicks give them plenty of room.

Always feed the hen on chicken or meat upon Sundays.

In fighting vermin, starting early is three-fourths of the battle.

For strong fertility there should be a change of mate birds once a week.

If several hens are set in one room, it is desirable to confine them in pairs.

If a cow is not worth good feeding she is not worthy to be a member of your herd.

Gather and burn the brush; and plow the orchard not deeper than three or four inches.

Too much the chicks as soon as they are hatched. This enables one to rid their eggs later.

A paste of cow manure and clay will heal any wound of a girdled tree will often save it.

Pure-class fruit in first-class shape and well packed will sell as happily for more of the same kind.

Don't shut the chicks too closely are hatched. They need fresh air and lots of it in order to do well.

Young chicks should not be fed heavily upon corn meal. Corn meal has a very pretty young lady, he considered it his duty to be entertaining to her, so he bid her good morning and asked her if she knew when his mother was coming home. TEA TABLE BISCUITS

IN ALL SORTS OF FORMS THEY ARE IN HIGH FAVOR.

May Be Served in Whatever Manner the Hostess Desires, and Will Be Appreciated — Some Ideas That May Be Useful.

The hostess who understands how to make baking powder biscuit, dry bicuit and crusty cut, has an unlimited number of possibilities at her command. For the afternoon tea table these tiny biscuits are in high favor and appear in many guises.

Rolled biscuit may be made or sprinkled with grated cheese and baked for delicate brownness. In moderate oven, they furnish an appetizing accompaniment to afternoon or coffee. Rolled equally thin and baked with sugar, they are a delicious cinnamon, moistened with melted butter, these crisp bits have a suggestion of the much liked cinnamon bread toast. In the summer decoration, or a few currants can be used to good effect.

For the hostess who likes a bit of novelty, what is commonly called a "double biscuit," is an excellent affair to serve with the tea cup. After cutting the biscuit into thin slices, put a bit of marmalade or jam or marmalade in the center of half the number and cover with the remaining halves. Let the filling be kept well in the center and in baking it will not come out. Served with the tea cup, these are delicious little mouthfuls.

Another form that may be used in the same way, or cream cheese softened with cream, olive or nuts.

The same biscuit dough made soft, covering with a spoon, is the foundation of a "drop batter," can be used for the filling of a fruit pie, or for shortcake as one would little cakes. These biscuits, so baked, have a delicious crust of the soft dough, and the fruit always attracts attention from guests who like to combine fruit and cream. Sets of these diminutive cakes can be found in shops, since the preferred style being arranged for the serving of a cake or tea table.

Some exercise is necessary to the raising of chickens, but do not give them such a task that it wores them out any at all.

A chicken that ceases to grow to the size of its parents should be removed at once at it at every point, which will soon set it to laying.

Keep a flock of hens a good cow or two, prepare for a good garden this year, and you won't have to complain of the high cost of living.

Take great care when measuring ingredients so as to turn too deep, as the raspberry, being a surface rooter, but roots are to be severely pruned.

Better feeding means the growing of more home crops. The paleability of commercial feeds is largely determined upon the way in which they are cured

It is very foolish to go to the cost and trouble of raising young fowls when it out in the field until wind has blown dirt into it and weather has ruined it in a shed.

Breed from the hens that retain their color after molting. By this means you will soon have a strain of good chickens. This applies to all breeds and both sexes.

With veal at its present high prices there is a big temptation to let some of the calves go to market. The wise fall dairyman does not let the tempta get into the better of him.

Good farm implements are necessary these days for successful farming. But it is a waste of money to buy without implements that are badly needed on your farm. Invest in need and equipment.

Sweet clover does the best when sown early in the spring. When once sod, will grow sweet clover. Sweet clover is a biennial and the first year it will grow upon gravel beds which will not grow grass.

There are a few soils in the United States where an application of a new chemical fertilizer, monocalcium phosphate, potash and phosphorus—will return an increase in crop that will more than pay for all the elements that are needed. Most soils are exhausted in all three elements.

According to Professor S. J. Master of Kansas, the best way to get rid of grasshoppers is the adult fields is by the use of the bait trap. Professor Hunter has been carrying on experiments for several years to eliminate the destructive hoppers and from the results of these experiments he has learned that dishing is not only fatal to the grasshoppers, but that it also greatly increases the yield of alfalfa

SMART WITHOUT FUSS

NEW FROCKS FOR LITTLE GIRLS SLIP ON LIKE COATS.

No Cause to Complain of Lack of Variety in Children's Dress This Season—Simplicity the Watchword.

Certainly no one will have cause to complain of any lack of variety in children's frocks this season. They are as refined and sweet in their very dissimilarity as those designed for their elders. Variety is nevertheless to be insisted, and as to design, both the French and the English little folk's frocks are about equally popular. Frills and fluffy ruffles do not seem to belong to the children of nowadays, the exuberance of their frocks being attained through good lines and simplicity, though not necessarily severity.

An effective design for a small girl is here illustrated. A trifling point in its favor is that the sleeves are in the bottom down one side and is held in loosely with a soft ornament such a which, in its treatment, forms the feature of the frock. White sponge or ratine is used, cut in one piece from neck to hem. The opening down the left side is carved from under the arm to the hem. The lower corner rounded off, leaving a very short point in the skirt. The sleeves are long and easy fitting, set into dropped shoulders under a narrow band. Blue or tan colored ratine may be used for the much rounded back collar and cuffs, with the buttons along the opening down the left side of the frock in all white. A six-inch width of ratine will be required for the making of the ribbon for the sash, which is tied around the waist with one end and run through the eyelet in front and knotted under the opposite.

Fashion's Fancies

The light laces—shadows and so on—are the kinds promised for spring.

A tattooed effect in white on white brocade is worn with the creffelly tailored suit.

Some of the new negligees are so much like evening gowns that the soft finished loose slip undergarment must be worn with them to keep the gorgeous meshes and hand run borderings from irritating the skin.

A pretty boudoir robe is of a shell pink charmeuse with a half girdle of rose-pink ribbon caught with a pin at each side.

Lingerie frocks of embroidered net, batiste, voile or crepe have broad girdles of satin ribbon, and a deep band of color is repeated at the neck.

Striped materials are extensively used for street costumes, and a fine example of the vogue is a brown striped material has a modified bolero jacket, with revers of brown velvet, and white checked silk.

Among the most interesting long, narrow straw hats trimmed with ribbon is stretched in the manner of a crown from the front and extending over the brim, and a large wing or wings of bright flowers is placed in the front.

Good to Know.

If you have ever attempted to embroider or darn with colored silks, burlap you have doubtless grown angry and impatient at the fraying out of the edges to reveal.

If you had known how to evercast all the edges this could have been prevented. But it takes time. Next time you have to work with burlap in making a cushion top or curtain simply stitch the cut edges or the sewing machine, using a fine stitch and the tension loose, and then sew the edge in a wavy line, keeping close to the edge all the time. It won't look as well as the edge of the cloth, but this way. The stitching won't show when the burlap is sewed up or the curtains are hemmed.

BEST OF PURIFYING AGENTS

Charcoal and Quicklime Are Nature's Remedy—How to Get Most Lasting Results.

Charcoal and quicklime are the best known purifiers. The best plan for utilizing charcoal in the food closet or in the cellar bottles of fruits or vegetables are kept is to suspend it in a net or bag. Any coarse muslin will do. Make a number of bags sufficient to hold from a pound to two lumps of charcoal. Do not powder the charcoal, but fill the bags with the lumps, and after they have had an opportunity to display their marvelous power to absorb all sorts of bad smells and impurities, and have their atmosphere pure and sweet, their uselessness will be apparent. Remember that the power of charcoal to serve its purpose is limited, and it must be put to the freshness, and the freshening process is restored by placing it out doors in a warm sun. Charcoal has been known to regain its purifying power for the purpose and how the charcoal very last. The fresh lumps may then be re-bread to the net bags and served for the purpose of deodorizing.

Some of lime and jars of plaster of Paris are also valuable deodorizing agents, but their useful properties are not fully utilized unless they are dusting and purifying absorbents are be placed in the cellar. They are the ones that are really handled in the form of a pail with the layers of lime or plaster of Paris between each of which every is distributed their absorbent qualities in more than double measure.

WOMEN'S BANK MEETS WANT

London Institution, Run By and For the One Sex, Has Proved Successful.

The possibilities of banking as a power for women have been demonstrated by the Women's Bank in London, which was inaugurated a couple of years ago in London, and which has since acquired by women, proved an unqualified success, and has responded to new and enlarged quarters.

The bank's success, like the opinion of Mrs. Kate Reilly, the manager, is largely due to the support which it has received from women.

The new premises with which women of all classes and from all parts of the world may bank, and in which the institution devoted entirely to their needs, are in the Strand, and the new's novel departure was fulfilling a long-felt want. Mrs. Reilly thinks.

The bank gives women the privileges of consulting one of their own sex in all matters of finance.

"The business transacted here is the same as that transacted by any other joint stock bank, and the fact that it is run entirely by women is a good evidence that one sex is not behind the other in the matter of money and a head for figures.

"A feature of the new establishment here is a rendezvous room for our customers, where tea and coffee will be served.

Model Farm Colony.

The Imperial Institute of the Commercial announces that the minister of agriculture of the Transvaal has received from the Brazil Railway company the offer of the free settlement of the farmers at Corumbahy, on the railway route to Sao Paulo. The colony was acquired by the company to demonstrate the possibility of growing wheat, the latest modern machinery being employed. Twenty-six village houses have been built for colonists, and no further building operations are established in them. The formula of payment is that the whole value of pure rice having been imported, the colonists will be required to buy the modern appliances, also from Switzerland, which they will require to use. An agricultural expert is on the farm to give advice and help to settlers. The conditions. An agreement has been entered into with the Canadian government from Holland, and already 100 pounds of the Dutch have left for Canada, including a market in Carinthia, Posts Greece and Sao Paulo.

Turkish Women's Dress Failed.

Turkish women have taken no part in the movement in which many social changes are being introduced in Turkey. They know how to sit. Hesnor Osmanbey, a Constantinople writer, tells the fact that the Turkish veil to sit in a spiritual Kiosque, whether it be live, or stay, or visit. To the question, "Why do you wear the veil?" he gets the reply, "I am sitting in Stamboul." Or, he inquires, "Are you married?" the answer will be "No, I am sitting in the veil." Other than that sit they sit quietly, "in the perfect enjoyment of their veils." What don't have to hang their hands busy. They crochet or knit, or just sit.

Having been dedicated to the profession of science, Charcot's son was taken, while still a small boy, to see the anatomical museum, and was requested for disorders at the operating theatre. Here he saw all was darkness and silent, he was required to go and look at the specimens and bring back the culprits head. The boy had hardly entered the amphitheatre his nerves, and knock him to fear nothing, living or dead.—Francis B. Lenge, in The Atlantic.

MANY RECEIVE THEIR SENTENCES

Judge Swope Imposes Sentences on Many Prisoners. Only One Gets Penitentiary Time. Six Months for Blanche Pane.

Sentences ranging from one month in jail to a year in the Eastern Penitentiary were set by Judge Swope on Saturday. Many of the cases grew out of the recent Anniversary and a number of the prisoners told of how they came to visit this town. Every one of those up for sentence pleaded guilty to the charges on which they were arraigned.

Nellie Cross, colored, who pleaded guilty to keeping a bawdy house and a disorderly house, was first called for sentence. The offenses were committed during the time preceding the anniversary and it is known that white audiences frequented the place. District Attorney Wilde urged a sentence that would serve as a warning to people of this town that such resorts would not be tolerated here. The Cross woman blamed her husband, Charles Paine, arrested at the time the house was raided, and promised no repetition of the offense. Nellie Cross had served two months and one was then imposed an additional term of one month in the county jail.

Archie Lee, colored, a non-resident, was arrested by detectives for attempting to pick a visitor's pocket during the anniversary and pleaded guilty. He had been in jail since his arrest and was sentenced for an additional month.

David Boettcher, 55 years old, of Lancaster County, went on the premises of William Kinnard near town on July 10 and attacked Mrs. Zinsend. She called for help and the man was driven away, later he was picked up by the police. He pleaded intoxication as an excuse for his crime, claiming that it was his first appearance in Court. A sentence of nine months in the county jail.

William Williams pleaded guilty to furnishing liquor on Sunday. Duffey's Malt Whiskey, a patent medicine, bought on a prescription from a veterinarian at camp was procured and distributed by Williams to several friends who contributed to the purchase price, was the stuff in question. He had been in jail 44 days and was given an additional thirty days.

George Gowdy, colored, an employee of the State highway, alleged to have stolen articles from fellow employees and admitting the theft of a cheap watch, said his home was in New York City. He claimed that he took the watch from under a pillow in order to procure whiskey, expecting to return the watch after getting it out of pawn. The watch has been returned to the owner. Crosby gave his age as 23 years and said he had been arrested but once before in his life, and then in New York for intoxication. He promised total abstinence and was placed on parole for a period of one year.

D. G. Hilton, of Philadelphia, gave intoxication as his excuse for open lewdness to which he pleaded guilty. He said that it was the only support of his mother. A jail sentence of one month was pronounced.

Arthur Litton, a veteran of the Spanish-American war and a former Regular Army man, in jail since June 24th, pleaded guilty to twenty-five intoxication as the cause for his predicament. He presented a pledge that he had signed while placed on parole for one year.

Blanche Pane, colored, 18 years old, who shot Henry Goff when he mal-treated his wife and her sister, admitted the crime charged. Attorney Wilde said that the Penn woman had been a source of annoyance since 1919. Six months' sentence in jail was imposed.

John Pane, colored, who stole harness from Oliver C. Maring, was given from one year to three years in the Eastern Penitentiary. Pane said he only "borrowed" the harness, intending to return it that evening. Pane had served time here twenty years ago for stealing chickens and, in Colville, for theft, also admitting incarceration in the penitentiary.

Harry Wagaman, concerned in the affray with two State police on the mountain four months ago, will go to Waynesboro as soon as arrangements can be made to have him take up work in one of the shops of that town. He will be placed on probation. Wagaman's counsel claimed that he had his first fight with the police before they disclosed their identity, that Gary appeared in the garb of mountaineers and that Wagaman had no means of knowing they were officers until they had displayed their badges during the fight. Judge Swope took occasion to censure that method of work by police.

Milton Carl pleaded guilty to two charges, practicing a hotel keeper and practicing as a veterinarian without license. He was given a month in

BOY SHOT BY HIS YOUTHFUL UNCLE

Eight Year Old William Beaver of Gettysburg Loses his Arm as Result of Play with Gun that "Wasn't Loaded."

The "gun that wasn't loaded" story was repeated once again about four o'clock Friday afternoon when Charles Beaver, the eight year old son of Mr. and Mrs. William D. Beaver, of Chambersburg street, was seriously shot by the accidental discharge of a shotgun in the hands of Mr. and Mrs. John Pepple at their home between Cashtown and Orrtanna.

The shooting was purely accidental, for the boy's uncle thought that the shotgun shot gun and neither one thought that it was loaded. Young Pepple had just picked up the gun and was in the act of aiming it, in sport, when he touched the trigger and the entire load of shot entered the right arm of the little boy. The distance was only a few feet, giving the shot no time to spread, or it might have resulted in fatal wound. The bone in the upper part of the Beaver boy's right arm was entirely shattered, for a distance of four inches.

The injured boy was taken into the house and medical aid was obtained. Later in the evening he was brought to his home on Chambersburg street in an automobile and Doctors Dickson, Hamilton and Stevens were summoned and decided that it would be necessary to amputate the arm at the shoulder. The operation was performed on Saturday.

The little boy had been spending some time at his mother's home between Cashtown and Orrtanna and it seems that his mother's young brother was fully aware of the dangers that there were always together and very fond of each other and the affair was all the more sad on account. Attorney Pepple was the elder of the two and his feelings must be very much worried over the accident. For some time he had been in the habit of saying "I did not mean to do it, I did not mean to do it."

It was but the thought that the injured lad would be taken to the Chambersburg hospital for treatment but he want him to be taken from home so the neighborhood was also at their home on Chambersburg street.

GETS HUNTERS' LICENSE BLANKS

County Treasurer Spangler Receives the Necessary Blanks and Hunters May now Make Application, Some Requirements.

County Treasurer George E. Spangler on Saturday received the applications for hunters' licenses and other papers necessary for the enforcement of the new hunters' license act, from the office of the State Game Commission. The number of licenses to be sold for each county in the State about 1,000 cards.

The enforcement of the act will become very soon, as the blanks are back by printing, and it is the intention of the commission to get them to all hunters to make application and to handle the licenses from the two.

Under the arrangement each county will have a serial number, Adams being given the No. 1 and York with No. 67. Dr. Kalbfus calls attention to the fact that the law says that the fees for licenses secured directly of county treasurers and $1.15 for those secured through justices of the peace. Descriptions of applicants must be made on the blanks.

Attention is also called to the fact that the open season prohibits the killing of wildcats, weasels, owls and hawks regardless of the season from the hunters' license, the act of 1919 superseding that one-half of the revenue from that source to counties.

It is gravely given as an historical fact that Peter Minuit and his company bought all of Manhattan island for the name of $24 after having reduced the owners to a state of intoxication. It is also stated as true that the Indians utter that bit of comic philanthropy gave to the island the name of Manhattan, which it is said was Indian for "the island of blissful intoxication."

Feared He Had Lost Pups.

A minister was called from the dinner table to see a woman with her youngest child, a boy of four or five years old, beside her. She said that the father had gone to marry someone else. MANY SOUTHERN TOURISTS HERE

Every Week Sees Numerous Visitors in Gettysburg from Southern States Thought to be Direct Result of Recent Anniversary.

As a result of the favorable impression taken home by the Confederate veterans, who participated in the big battle anniversary here in July, the tourist trade from the South has been doubled several times and more visitors from that section are coming to Gettysburg now than at any period for a number of years.

Hotel registers, garage proprietors and battlefield guides all report a very noticeable increase and there is scarcely a day when one or more large automobiles bearing the license tag of a southern state may not be seen on the avenues or in town. In spite of the discouraging feature of Gettysburg business one who is acquainted with conditions said,

"We find that almost all of the many Southerners now coming to Gettysburg have been brought here by the glowing accounts told by the old soldiers upon their return home in July. The treatment which the Confederate veteran has been the subject of favorable comment all through the South and the people who formerly were hesitant about coming here, possibly because of some sectional pride, possibly because they believed they would not be welcomed, are now coming and enjoying the trip."

Gratifying as this condition is, the commercial side of the proposition adds not a little, to the minds of local business people, to the value of this more or less unexpected result of the recent anniversary.

"Gettysburg has practically opened up an entirely new field of tourist trade," said one business man who has been among the first to welcome visitors, "and we have the whole South to draw from now which was undeveloped to any great extent before. That hundreds and thousands of people from the south of Mason and Dixon line will now come here is assured for the years to come, by, if all are given courteous treatment, it will mean much in a business way to the town, and of course we must remember the Southerner likes to hear about the Confederates and their work and does not appreciate it when we speak of the Civil War as known as a "Rebel". Attention to them and other details will help matters materially in developing this new business, even if we have no better motive for giving our Southern Gettysburg visitors due.

FLIMSY CARS IN WRECKED TRAIN

HEARING HELD IN SECRET

"I Fell Through the Roof of the Car With Woman's Body," Was the Startling Testimony of William F. Clarkson.

New Haven, Conn., Sept. 5.—Although the inquiry conducted by Coroner Edward C. Hine into the disastrous wreck on the New Haven railroad at the Westport curve, in which 21 persons lost their lives, the nature of some of the testimony became public.

Testimony that the roof at at least one of the Pullman cars in the wreck was so rotten that it would not support his weight was given by William F. Clarkson, a tool manufacturer, the first witness called by the coroner.

Clarkson told the coroner that the car in which he was riding was so rotten that it crumbled beneath his weight when he dove into the aisle to rescue whom he was trying to rescue and he fell. Clarkson said that he saw a dead woman on a northbound local train. The wreck occurred at 8 o'clock. He was one of the first to reach the scene.

My train, which was a little late, came to a halt just below the wreck," said Clarkson. "I ran forward and looked down into the ditch. I saw by the line the first work of rescue was being done.

"With others I climbed on to the roof of the car. The roof of the coach had been thrown on the roof near the rear platform. I crawled over the top of it, when I fell, the roof crumbling beneath my weight, to the ground. Several other men, I believe, had similar experiences.

"In the course of my efforts I fell through the roof once. I am positive I am convinced that no damage the cars have been subject to can be held responsible for the disasters. It had been a good many years since I had ridden in the cars, and the roofs and sides of the cars appeared to be in very well sustained to cover the condition up.

"I was told that the question of whether I had heard the train crew whistle for the curve, and to how the wreck occurred, I could not answer. I do not know what I had heard some one say after the brakes were set. The engineer's cab did not work well, and that this had caused the delay in the train having reached the block."

Clarkson appeared a second face, the result, he said, of his fall through the roof of the car.

Clarkson said that at the time he was testifying before the coroner there was no danger that one could not see 100 feet ahead. He said that he thought that the island light was turned red.

Although Coroner Hine said the hearing is the utmost secrecy and instructed those present not to talk about the witnesses were questioned in the presence of the newspaper reporters and a transcript of his testimony after he left.

Allan Sosman, brakeman on the train operated by the New Haven railroad company, which was running fifteen minutes behind the regular section, said the coroner now his train was flagged by the fireman. The fireman, he said, was so funny that one could not see 100 feet ahead.

Coroner Hine was refused to allow newspaper men to enter the room during the express, which resumed the Barnum inquiry at 2 o'clock this afternoon. The local union of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen at which the men had demanded that the coroner's inquest be secret, and Samuel H. C. Terry, an attorney, to appear for them. Terry said that he had not yet spent a cent to make his appearance before the coroner.

When permission to appear was refused Terry said that he would apply for a superior court for an injunction to restrain the coroner from holding the star chamber proceedings.

THAW LOSES HIS FIGHT FOR FREEDOM

Will Be Deported From Canada Within Twenty-four Hours.

Coaticook, Que., Sept. 5.—Harry K. Thaw left his field for freedom. He is still in Canada, and will be until tomorrow, but his fight is lost. He reported la certain.

The Canadian government does not want him. New York state does, and Thaw will be deported to that state before 24 hours.

Then his attorneys turned on Thaw.

A board of inquiry made up of five petty immigration officers deliberated for two hours on the case of Thaw. Then was given one of the most complete examinations that any case ever before court officials. The entire history of Thaw's life, from his childhood to the present, was brought out in every direction but that of Coaticook.

Lack of money is largely to blame. One of the lawyers said he had not seen Thaw's family had deserted him. "It is a question," said this man, who may not be named, "that his relatives believe he belongs in Matteawan and not at large. The truth of the matter is that Thaw is insane."

When the board gave its decision Thaw was kept in the anteroom of the interior if he wishes. He probably will not leave it for a time, for even the government will take the precaution to see that he does not get out of the country. He will be sent to New York and remain there in custody until permits the board to depart from Canada. Thaw's lawyers say the chances are that he will be sent to Matteawan. That is the hope of Thaw's attorneys say. The New York officers declined to say anything.

HUERTA WON'T BE CANDIDATE

Not to Run as President of Mexican Republic.

SO WASHINGTON IS ASSURED

President Wilson's Mexican Policy Scored by Senators and Congressmen—Bryan Hails Reports as Prudent.

Washington, Sept. 5.—The first official information that the Washington government has been orally assured that Huerta will not be a candidate at the Mexican elections was permitted to become public.

The administration construes these assurances as meaning also that there will be no circumvention by Huerta's resigning and becoming a candidate.

The Mexican situation bobbed to the front suddenly today. Senator Bristow declared he believed the government should withdraw General Carranza, the Constitutionalist leader, to set arms and ammunition in the United States, because Huerta had been relieved to import arms until very recently.

Senator Bristow explained that he brought up the question because he had seen and become convinced that congress was solidly behind President Wilson's Mexican policy. To purge of that policy, he said, he took the occasion to advise the senate. He argued that the United States by shutting importation of arms to Huerta had re-signed him.

"It seems to me that we should reconsider the belligerents who are fighting him," he said. "I believe the nations should be allowed to settle their domestic troubles, but every sense of fairness and justice in this nation should be given the right to purchase arms and munitions of war."

Senator Bristow said he disagreed with the President's policy in that he believes in leave Mexico. That, he maintained, was the only way Huerta could be, was the only way Huerta could be, visited the district with Child Labor Inspector Lewis Hine. Mr. Hine's visit to

At the opening of the Gettysburg public schools on Monday the teachers, principals and school boards found themselves face to face with a serious condition in the largely increased enrollment in every school, the lack of facilities to take care of the new pupils.

In the High School an entering class of fifty two brought up the total enrollment to 175 when school closed on the opening day last year. Even last year it was found necessary to put in more desks in the assembly room of the building and some nine more must be installed, using up every available inch of space in that room. Next year it is stated by the school authorities it will be absolutely necessary to have more room and the best method of ensuring this is agreed to be the enlargement of the present building which was built with the idea in view of adding a second story over the present lower story.

Of the 158 pupils now enrolled at the High School fifty-eight or thirty-six from the surrounding townships. The School Board will reap a return of almost $900 from these rural pupils this year, an item which allows of an enlarged income and better equipment than it could be possible for the directorate to provide without this money, and it is believed that it will be the best sort of business to prepare the school authorities for another 40 such pupils who may apply.

It is very apparent that next year's entering class will be even larger than this year for the Eighth Grade now has the largest enrollment in the history and the usual proportion of these boys and girls will go ahead with their school training and enter with the Freshman class next fall.

At the Meade Building the Grammar schools, with Miss Elizabeth Rummel principal, the new conditions center in the department plan, the pupils gathering in as usual every day, and then going into their various classes. The big room, in years gone by used for entertainments, has been fully equipped with new single desks for this purpose and the plan is reported to add materially to the efficiency of these grades.

The Meade Building now has every grade from Primary up to the High School and the fact that sections of town may attend without having to travel to the distance which would be necessary if they had to go to the High Street building. Miss Stonesifer having the Primary Grade in this building and has a newly equipped room for her work.

At the High Street building, which included the grades from First to Sixth, industry, the same overcrowded condition reported elsewhere prevails and in this building the Fifth and Sixth Grade, there are nine more pupils than the number for which seating accommodations were provided. Some arrangement will be made to meet the new flow.

With the rapid increase in the population of Gettysburg has come not only increase in the enrollment but also greater efficiency in the schools and Gettysburg's system is now one of the prides of the town. The faculty throughout, with the exception of the High and Colored schools is the same as last year. Note has been made of Miss Bertha Pilsbury but the new Colored School, who succeeds Miss Curry.

In the High School William Day, the teacher of manual training has tendered his resignation and the school opens with no one to fill that position. The Board has this matter under consideration and expects to fill it in the very near future. Miss Helen Day, of Baltimore, the new Domestic Science teacher, was also unable to be present on Monday owing to sickness. The new room for this department is being fitted up to meet all the practice style and the girls attending the school will have the finest of advantages in this line which can be procured with the means at the hands of the School Board. Miss Helen Kendlehart has the place occupied last year by Miss Pilsbury but the remainder of the faculty are the same as in 1912-1913.

The compulsory vocination law is enforced here and the parents and pupils co-operate cheerfully with the Board so that the town physicians have been busy with the work. The attendance law will not be enforced until the latter part of the month when Mr. Utz will resume his duties as truant officer.

Misses Winnie, Mae, Edna and Nellie Bledsoe, have returned to their home on Stratton street, after spending a week at Fox Mar.

FAMILY TROUBLE AIRED IN COURT

After Long Recital of Grievances Husband Decides to Still Cares for his Wife and they are Reunited. Five Divorce Cases.

"With all her faults I love her still" was the fitting close of the case of the passing of peace and the parties brought against Jacob Starner by his wife. The trial lasted nearly three hours on Saturday afternoon and, in the end, resulted in the two of them, up-staves, kept the room in a comfortable state of merriment.

It seems that Mrs. Jacob Starner was arrested on May 5th, charged with non-support of herself and two children by his wife, who was admitted by all to be a very industrious and hard-working woman. On the other hand it was developed at the trial that she was the "man of the place", as she collected all the funds from her boarders, of which she kept a number, and paid out to her husband should wish and when he was in need, according to his story, forcing him to keep a bicycle and become expert in the art of cycling in order that he might be wanted to go to work, or come to town, if such necessity arose in the family.

Each side was strengthened by the presence of a number of witnesses and when all had been heard the auditors were perplexed as to how matters would happen. Judge Swope suggested that both injured parties adjourn to another room and try and adjust the differences themselves and again the two came out in the court room amicably. They succeeded and the case was settled by the husband and wife declaring that, despite all her shortcomings, his wife still retained the love of her husband.

The costs were divided.

Other business transacted Saturday afternoon included the following:

Wm. A. McClean, Executor, has appointed commissioner to take testimony in the divorce proceedings of Clara Cashaugh vs. Edward Cashaugh.

William McIlhenny Esq., was appointed commissioner to take testimony in the divorce proceedings of Minnie Wilson vs. Harry Wilson.

WASHINGTON BOY SCOUTS IN TOWN

Youngsters in Khaki Attract Attention in Gettysburg. Story of Work in the Slums is Told in St. James Lutheran Chapel.

The fifteen Washington Boy Scouts arrived in Gettysburg Saturday on bicycles.

They are making their 300 mile hike on a "heavy marching order," that is, they carry their blankets, food for a day's consumption, and a few other necessities. Three hospitable tents and a commissary tent, loaned by the War Department, have been secured accommodations while on the march and will furnish camping quarters for the boys' comforts on the battlefield.

These boys left the city as "tenderfoot" but when they arrive in Washington it is expected that they will be full-fledged scouts, as on the hike they receive instruction in tracking, signaling, camp-cooking, and all other necessary requirements to promote the "finished article."

Sunday night Mr. Kline gave a lecture in St. James Chapel "Boy Life on the City Streets." Mr. Kline told many interesting anecdotes of his experience in New York, which several remarkable examples of results obtained by the Scouts of the street. He also described the work of the Gospel Mission in Washington with which the scout troop is connected. Lunches may be bought at the mission for five cents, and the best dinner for five cents. STARTING WORK AT PLAYGROUND

Grading has been Commenced and Erection of Caretaker's Home will be Started in Near Future. Extensive Preparations.

Work at grading the Kurtz Playground was started on Monday and on Thursday the bids for the erection of the caretaker's house were opened. The building of the structure will then be started, as soon as the contract is let, and it is confidently expected to be ready for actual use within a few months.

The site is the one of the most attractive features of the place. It is the highest point in the immediate center of the tract, and outside of the borough limits, so that it will not be necessary to comply with the borough regulations regarding the sewer question. The building will be two stories in height, the first of weatherboard siding and the second, frame. The basement will be used for furnace and laundry and the first floor for boys' and girls' dressing rooms with lockers, one room at each end and the storage room in the center. The second story will be used as the home for the caretaker.

John Delap, who has the contract, has the building well under way and will push it along rapidly. Two base ball diamonds are being built, the one on the lower level of the park for the older players. The adults' grounds will be on the upper level of the park ground and the other diamond will be for the use of boys.

A number of tennis courts are being built along the western side of the playground in the center. The several sufficient courts will be provided for the use of the public.

The problem of providing a drinking fuss will be solved by the use of part of the week when the flow of water will be tested to ascertain whether or not there is sufficient pressure for the amount necessary for a pool of considerable dimensions.

The delay in getting the grounds into condition for use will result in the necessary to get out the plans but now it is expected that operations will be pushed with the result that interruption until all are completed.

A DEACON'S WIFE

By M. QUAD

Copyright 1913, by Associated Literary Press.

I guess Long Green-ers was forty-five years old when I met him, but I have never a prettier, jovial tempered fat man and don't know but a quarter, I may save my children, and a sister who is to marry, I'll be single.

He'll marry again within a year or two, of course, for the comfort and ease of the villagers.

Long Green is a country, and after eight years had passed away he was given credit for more than all the rest everywhere. He had just passed his fifty-fifth birthday when he drove down to Hartford one day with home to lunch. He was a somewhat June day, and if Long Green ever had a weakness it was said to run into a cyclone within an hour he would have tempted at the prohibition. He was not four miles from Hartford and looking out a load when the cyclone appeared.

It had been sitting down on a stone fence, it was a woman with a baby in her pocket. She was about forty-five years old and had a pleasant face. Her dress was soaked, but what a gift on her was said was settled in favor of Long Green. He didn't look at all to the demon like a cyclone as a wheels-and wind. Both were seemingly inactive, and inside of ten minutes they were both taking part in their resemblances. The cyclone was a demon turned Presbyterian. It had been scowling at the home of a farmer. She was a married woman, by the by. Cyclone had been a widow for five years

Express Crashes Into Wooden Pullmans on Train.

BRAKES FAILED TO WORK

Accident Occurred During a Big Rain Near New Haven, Conn.—Several Victims From Philadelphia.

New Haven, Conn., Sept. 4.—Twenty-six persons lost their lives and forty were injured when the White Mountain express, bound for New York, crashed into the rear end of the second section of the Bar Harbor limited, leaving Boston one hour and fifty minutes earlier. The wreck occurred on the New Haven railroad just outside the city limits.

Owing to a short signal veiled in a thick fog, it is given as the cause of the wreck, Engineer James A. B. Miller, who says that as soon as he realized the danger he did all he could to stop the train. The brakes would not hold on the first truck and the train, many cars deep, plunged its way through two wooden Pullman cars, splintered them to kindling and killed or wounded most of the sleeping passengers in their berths. The bodies of some of the victims were mangled.

A party of boy campers, sixty-five in number, returning from "Camp Columbus," at Monmouth, Me., were in a Pullman car which was over-crowded. Two of these boys, William Alexbud, of Norfolk, Va., and Asa Green, of New York, were killed.

The total list of dead is as follows: Miss Maria Stockton Billitt, Miss Miss Hattie Crowe Fox, Robert Fox, Daniel N. McQuillen, Miss Wm. Tate, Daniel E. McQuillen, Miss Emily K. Davis, all of Philadelphia.

William Alexbud, Norfolk, Va.

Harold Avery, New York.

Frank Butler, Philadelphia, Pa.

Albert Green, New York.

R. A. Hamilton, New Haven, Conn.

Philo Hotchkiss, brother of R. A. Hotchkiss.

Henry Isaac, a Japanese, New York.

H. F. Martin, Bern Mont, Pa.

Miss Annie White, Boston.

Mary Jones (has not last name), Hartford, Conn.

Margaret Armstrong, Washington.

Albert Freed, New York.

George Hoyt, New York.

Five bodies are unidentified.

The bodies of some of the dead were found fifty feet away in the fields. Some of the dead and injured were hurried to New Haven, Wallingford and Meriden, most of them were taken in trolley cars.

Both trains were heavily laden with returning excursionists. They were running behind time through the heavy fog.

The Bar Harbor limited had stopped in the block, but the last car of the same train was struck on the side of the block limits. The signals had cleared and the engineer had got ten under a slight headway when the White Mountain express crashed along. The engineer of the latter was unable to stop his locomotive completely, and crashed through two of the sleepers on the Bar Harbor train and knocked the rear sleeper over the embankment.

The shock of the collision was so terrific that linen and bed clothing from the berths of the sleepers was swept out of the broken windows and carried in the approach wires and telephone nearby, where it still hung when the wrecking crew arrived.

The White Mountain express was scarcely awakened by the collision. It proceeded on its way after a few hours delay.

All the passengers were in their berths and in their night clothes, making the identification of the dead difficult.

The entrance to the White Mountain express stuck to his post until the last moment and only slightly hurt. The two sleepers which were crushed were a mass of splinters a few minutes after the accident. The locomotive on the rear of the wreckage and the remained almost upright for a considerable time.

The collision occurred on a straight stretch of track, but the fog was very dense at the time.

GOVERNMENT SUES HARD COAL TRUST

Action Aimed at Reading Co. and Allied Interests.

HAS RIGID DISSOLUTION PLAN

Philadelphia, Sept. 4.—The federal government renewed its attack on the hard coal industry today when it filed a petition against the Reading and its affiliated companies, under the Sherman anti-trust law and the commodities clause, requests are offered as the basis of the Taft administration's plan to take up the coal mines which were dropped by the reformation of the Roosevelt-Taft and his attorney general.

There is, however, one feature that distinguishes this suit from the one instituted under the Taft administration, and which is a new departure in anti-trust procedure. Attorney General McReynolds, in the petition filed today, asks that the Lehigh Valley Railroad Company and the Central Railroad of New Jersey and other corporations, which he contends are engaged in the coal business in the Reading anthracite area, ask that the Reading Company be made a defendant at the earliest time, so that those corporations "no pretense but to conduct affairs in such a way as to be subject to control or dissolution."

The means that Attorney General McReynolds intends to use settled in advance in this case the question that has caused so much controversy in the Union Pacific-Southern Pacific dissolution suit.

The attorney general always has maintained a vigorous opposition to the transfer of the dissolution permitted by the government's petition in the suit of the Standard Oil company where a plan was submitted by the stock holders. The subsidiary companies was permitted to be distributed among the stockholders of the parent company.

The coal and transportation companies representing an investment of $1,000,000,000 are made defendants in the suit, together with President Baer, of the Reading, and other officers.

The companies are the Reading company, the Philadelphia & Reading Coal and Iron company, the Central Railroad of New Jersey, the Lehigh & Wilkes-Barre Coal company, the Lehigh Valley Coal Sales company, the Wilmington & Northern Railroad company, the Lehigh & New England Railroad company, the Susquehanna River Railway company and the Lehigh & New England Railroad company.

In a set forth in the petition that he combine ion of railroads, coal companies and individuals named is the fact of defendants control in the practical sense by the use of the power to mined deposits of anthracite coal, and also to control the price of anthracite coal in the markets of the country. It is also charged that the defendants have control of the supply. It is asserted, will not be long if the present methods are not now known.

The petition is argued, this condition, if not dissolved, will own or control the entire supply of anthracite coal available known to exist. The petition also charges the combination by the use event that "only the law of supply and demand."

It is pointed out that while in all cases any one of the defendants is no more sensible for a monopoly to itself, it is charged that it does so by such profits, there is a tendency to the absorption of the entire profits to be allocated exclusively to the defendants, and the price of anthracite coal shall bear no control.

THAW'S FATE NOW RESTS WITH JUDGE

Court Reserves Decision In Habeas Corpus Case.

GOVERNMENT TAKES A HAND

Prankton's Counsel Brands Fugitive's Detention a Scandal and Says Jail Is No Public Boarding Place.

Shelbyville, Ind., Sept. —Harry K. Thaw came fast to face with a new issue in the prosecution of Quebec, where Louis attorney general and premier Lemieux, in the name himself, appeared before Judge Anderson, and demanded that steps be taken to bring about Thaw's return to the Shelbyville jail, where, for two months, the American has defied deportation.

Prankton Brands, through his representative brought the proceedings to a sensational climax in the Dunkirker, and declared that the detention was "scandalously that the confinement of a public boarding house," and ordered Thaw to an orderly jail, where he will be laughed at outwitting the authorities.

A. Gourdon and Samuel Jacobs, representing the state of Canada, appeared before Superior Judge Hollenbeck and pressed for an immediate hearing on the habeas corpus obtained last week.

If the writ is sustained, Thaw will probably be placed be hates of extradition proceedings are instituted.

When arguments were ended the court reserved decision. "I am not of such grave import," he said, "that I would not care to decide it today, but until I have given it careful consideration."

"If he is not liberated on the writ, Mr. Gourdon said, "extradition will be taken. Thaw must not be harbored in a public jail.

Thaw's face fell, and his lawyers declaring that the writ was not going, spoke in turn, pleading for adjournment until Friday.

"We must go on," said the court. "I am prepared to hear your arguments," said Mr. Geoffrion, "and it is of paramount importance that I should be on once more warmly." Gur.ja.s are not public boarding houses." Mr. Gourday proceed's desire that this matter should be hastened in the interests of Mr. Thaw. The prisons of the province are crowded, and he has no right to be detained here. A hearing directly for Bondrem, the constable who arrested Thaw, was granted and the writ of habeas corpus, and indirectly the question of extradition, followed by remarks. He denounced the case as a scandal to the province, and that he was incumbent on the court to "try the matter out on the basis of the normal state."

"The appearance of a representative for the attorney general is a thunderbolt to me," he continued. "I think I should like to consult the law as to his right in appeal."

"I sent for him," said the court emphatically. "The matter is urgent. Is this man illegally detained? Second the proceedings, have I a right to go for the writ of habeas corpus? Should the proceedings be quashed by law, purely, and I see no reason for granting an adjournment."

Mr. McKeown tried to open the proceedings by arguments on bail, but the court directed that he desist, and arguments on bail remain the next week as per Mr. Jacobs.

"There are no things, avowedly fo serving his bat and taking notes. There was a clerk dictating notes to a typewriter, a news torn, bats were smashed and collars rubbed in the dust. Finally a loud-mouthed cowier was heard, remarking that he had been driving for years a team of "three cheers for Thaw!" At this point the court left and it was difficult to hear counsel speak.

DAYLIGHT ROBBERY AT ATLANTIC CITY STATION

Thief Stole $1800 While the Agents Handled Rush.

Atlantic City, N. J., Sept. —A daylight robbery ever known here gaining away with $1800 in cash from the ticket office of the Philadelphia & Reading railroad station here, doors and windows was jammed with people and the rush was at its height.

The money had been stacked upon the counter awaiting the distribution by Ticket Agent Chapman who had counted it a few minutes before. The people, preparatory to making a departure on the afternoon train, had crowded bundling the rush.

The paymaster had been carefully tied up his bud. If a man had been at the window he would have seen the money that have been reserved but he must have been busy with his change and the assistant had all worked to the front window to help the ticket agent handle the ticket rush.

The money had but quietly pushed upon the door, which had been left a little open, and the thief, with a fine bills, stuffed them under his coat and then helped himself to the bundles of more persons crowded around the windows to buy tickets.

Chapman discovered the loss a moment after the thief had left the office for Philadelphia. He immediately got on the telephone to the police tower on the meadows and the train was stopped at the Delaware river bridge, but three coaches for suspicious characters.

No trace was found and then the Philadelphia police were notified. At that detectives there would complete search of the train when it left there. Hives are making an investigation, but it looks as though the thief would have had his getaway as neatly as the haul.

TALK OF BUYING CHEMICAL ENGINE

Town Councilmen and Firemen Have a Conference Regarding Purchase of Additional Apparatus for Local Department.

At a conference held by members of the town council and the fire company, and a representative of the Americas LaFrance Fire Engine Company, on Tuesday evening the question of the purchase of a chemical engine for Gettysburg was discussed at length.

The great amount of damage done by water at the Frey fire in June, and the difficulty of getting water on the Seminary building several weeks ago, have brought the necessity of some additional apparatus to the attention of local authorities and some steps are to be taken in the very near future.

Fire Chief Wierman stated at Tuesday evening's conference that he felt something should be secured quickly.

A committee was appointed some months ago to look into the matter of securing an automobile fire engine, but it is a big proposition and will require considerable time to get to making it a reality. Mr. Wierman thought some immediate steps should be taken to give the town better protection. Members of Council agreed with him.

The representative of the dealer stated that Gettysburg's needs would be met, he thought, by the purchase of a two wheel, double tank, 35 gallon machine, to be drawn by hand and to cost about $650. He stated that such a machine could be gotten quickly to fires and protect small fires from becoming large ones while, in cases where the blaze had already reached large proportions, it could be used to prevent a spread to other structures.

The fire at the farm of W. L. Gilbert, near Spring Grove, several weeks ago was cited. Here the barn could have burned but, in spite of terrific heat, every other building was saved. The one chemical tank was exchanged while the other was in action, a total of seventy charges being made during the progress of the fire. Spring Grove has the type of chemical recommended and Littlestown had it for a number of years, recently having had a motor truck built for it.

In further argument for a chemical apparatus it was stated that in York seventy five per cent of the fires are extinguished with chemicals and that in the past five years not one steamer has done service "worth a cent." The chemicals may be used in-doors without fear of damaging furniture or carpets, as the residue may be sweped up like salt after the liquid has dried.

Councilmen regarded the entire proposition in a favorable light and it is probable that definite action will be taken in the very near future.

Tuesday evening was the regular night of the December meeting of council but there was no quorum present and no business was transacted.

THOMPSON QUITS

Confirms Report that He Resigned As Coach.

Michael J. Thompson has severed his connection with the Mount St. Mary's College coach. He is now in New York City keeping business engagements relative to the coming football season.

There are several reasons assigned by Thompson for resigning as athletic head of the institution. His effort in every line of sport as the Emmitsburg college produced great results, and he was instrumental in staging the first set of track and field games ever held there. Yet he felt that he was being hindered in his work because the faculty would not agree to allow the athletes to remain over night in a town where the men would have to compete the next day.

He stated: "I found a fine bunch of athletic talent at the college when I went there, and the first set of games held proved successful. Yet, when I wanted to bring the athletes to Baltimore and Washington meets I was told to go ahead if it were possible to have the men go without remaining out of the college at night. This, of course, was an impossible feat and I became discouraged. In other branches of sport it was hardly supported."

Mrs. J. L. Bair, sons and daughters, visited friends in Frederick today.

Erie Deardorff, of West Middle street, has gone to Carlisle where he will attend the Carlisle Business College.

ENDS SEARCH OF HALF A CENTURY

Medal Found on Gettysburg Field Returned to Descendant of Owner after Fifty Years. Many Previous Efforts Fruitless.

Fifty years after he found a medal on the battlefield of Gettysburg, Jacob Bayly, of Baltimore, has just restored the decoration to the survivors of the owner. An unusual story was revealed Wednesday by Mr. Bayly.

Through the battle many people visited the field to hunt for relics of the engagement and to gaze upon the dead and wrecks of artillery strewn about the field. A corner of Mr. Bayly chanced upon a medal bearing the name of Pvt. Nassau. He was a boy and knew nothing that it had been presented to him by the State of New Hampshire for bravery. Another line indicated that Early belonged to the Tenth New Hampshire regiment.

The sister handed the medal to Mr. Bayly at once. She said that perhaps the owner had been killed in battle and that the medal would be a treasure to his family. Mr. Bayly promptly tucked a search for Early. He advertised in the papers, but got no trace of the medal. He wrote many letters to and made personal inquiry in the state archive, but no one seemed to recall Early. At every Grand Army reunion Mr. Bayly made inquiry in the corridors and inquire for the owner of the medal. He thought he would be successful in his quest at the great reunion of veterans at Gettysburg in July last.

He failed again to get trace of the owner, but decided to have a fob for the medal on to his own heirs as a relic of the battle of Gettysburg.

Delivering mail on the streets of Baltimore during the national convention of Eagles, last month, Mr. Bayly saw two delegates to the convention wearing badges with the bands of their hats announcing the fact that they were from New Hampshire. The latter carrier was surprised when he found that they were from the home of Nassau. That name was engraved on the medal.

Mr. Bayly asked both if they had ever heard of Early, they replied in the negative, but agreed to find the owner of the medal or a survivor when they went home. They were successful and soon Mr. Bayly got a letter telling him that Early had died some years ago, but that he had numerous relatives living. They were overjoyed to learn that the medal was found and he now possesses a letter full of appreciation and thanks for his diligent and protracted search.

ARREST UNDER CIGARETTE LAW

First Arrest in Adams County Made when Two Youths are Caught Refuse to Tell and Both Pay Fines Some Trouble here.

The first arrest in Adams County under the new cigarette law was made in Huntington township when Thomas Clapper and Claude Whistler, two youths, were arrested for smoking cigarettes on the streets of Arendtsville in their possession. Constable D. F. Stanley, of York Springs, made the arrest.

The boys were taken before Justice of the Peace C. L. Myers, of York Springs, and a hearing was granted. They refused to tell where they got the offending cigarettes and were fined $3.66 each, which they paid rather than involve the guilty person.

No arrests have been made in Gettysburg under the new law and tobacco dealers are said to be more careful than ever not to violate the provisions of the new legislation. This week, however, a young boy with a package of cigarettes in his pocket was seen on the streets and, when asked where he secured the cigarettes, he said that he got them at home. He was taken to the office of the burgess for investigation by the proper authorities and no legal action followed.

MANY FARMERS WANT ADVICE

State Counsellors, well Known here, Report that they Have Large Numbers of Requests for Information from Farmers.

Soils, drainage and co-operation are three topics in which the farmers of the State are showing a marked interest, according to the State farm advisors at their first annual conference held at the Capitol Tuesday. Prof. Franklin Menges, of York, and I. W. Lashley, of East Berlin, are on the list.

The counsellors, who have been in the field just one month, were summoned to the Capitol by Director A. L. Martin, for a general interchange of views. Each reported that he had from three to four weeks' engagements ahead and that farmers were sending letters to their homes as well as to the Capitol asking for visits.

The reports received indicate that the advisors have been received everywhere with open arms and the sect of 1913, which gives farmers in the field the benefits of practical talks and advice from men schooled in experience, has been remembered more than anything done for the farmers in recent years," said Director Martin.

"There is interest in every branch of work in which we are giving instruction, but the problems of soils is taking a prominent place and drainage of lands is another, both being branches which are highly important to us.

The advisors are: R. F. Kester and Franklin Menges, soils and crops; Dr. E. B. Cornwell and I. W. Lighty, dairying; W. Thos. Wittman and Frank Kline, poultry; C. C. McLain, water and drainage; S. W. Funk, marketing and co-operation; H. E. Dasett, co-operation; Jean Kane Fooks, home economics.

Each one made a report on the topic and it is the plan to push the work throughout the Winter so that farmers may have the advantage of expert advice in outlining next year's work.

Mrs. George McClellan, of West Middle street, and Mrs. Harry Gilbert, of Chambersburg street, are spending days with friends in Chester and Philadelphia.

Diamonds of the weight of twenty eight and two-fifths tons, which would fill a space of ten and one-half cubic yards and have a value of nearly $1,000,000,000, have been taken from the earth from the earliest time to the present day, according to the statistic just made by M. De Launay, the well known mineralogist writer for the Paris correspondent of the Philadelphia Ledger.

These figures, however, only cover the mines before cutting, which produce those stones of first water, to the last multiplier their value to five, or ten times. But, on the other hand, the rich lime would thus hold the total worth of the stones to be the most polished condition and would have a value of $4,000,000,000, which seems to prevent errors.

Of this total, according to M. De Launay, 140,000,000 carats of the precious stones have been cut, polished to facts, the source of all diamonds from ancient times to the eighteenth century, and 12,000,000 carats of which have been cut since the period between 1725 and 1910. These figures, which are considered authoritative, and gems representing 112,000,000 carats of the value of $80,000,000 would come from South Africa, which is now considered the source of the world's supply.

Apart from South Africa, Mr. De Launay says, the only other diamond fields worth count at all are those of New South Wales, the annual output of which, according to the last figures, is 2,705 carats.

COLLEGE OPENS FOR 81ST YEAR

Largest Enrollment in the History of Gettysburg College Marks Opening Day of School. President Granville's Address.

With the largest enrollment in the history of the institution Gettysburg College opened Wednesday for the new academic year. The freshmen class numbers about 120 and there are more additions to the other classes place the enrollment at a figure exceeding the opening day of any previous year.

The exercises were held in Brua Chapel at a quarter after nine and after the usual devotional exercises and the singing of the college hymn, President Granville made the opening address, emphasizing the importance of a college education and the responsibility placed upon those who are offered the opportunity of securing it. He said in part:

"In behalf of the board of trustees and the faculty of Pennsylvania College it is my duty, as well as my pleasure, to extend to you all a hearty welcome and greeting at this, the opening of our eighty first academic year.

"The opening of each session is, and should be, most joyous. It is the collegiate year, what the first burst of spring is to the calendar year. It is the awakening to the activity for the coming months and we all take joy in it.

"To be satisfied with what we are and with what we are doing, is rest on our oars, mental stagnation and death for any man and especially for the student. It is your duty as a college man to branch out, to seek the hidden treasures of intellectual power and knowledge. Your minds should be here filled with enthusiasm and ambition and I hope you already may possess. Two of the greatest dangers of college life are that the student may be fanatic and may cool and that his ambition may wane. Let me impress upon you, with all the power of my command, that you adhere to the high ideals with which you come to this college.

"In enrolling as college students you have taken one of the most important steps in your career. In this country only one man in every hundred secures a college education. Stop for a moment and realize the realization that you are one of the fortunate few. The framers of the American Republic were 500 to 1 in favor of the college trained men. You are to become one of a chosen body of picked men. There is an enormous responsibility placed upon you and you must make the most of your time here.

"You will be helped at this college by a body of men who realize just what it means to train a body of students. You will be helped here by men with well cared minds. You will sit at the feet of specialists who have devoted years to study, who know how to lift the wheel from the cart and give you the very best. You will come in contact with the strongest men known to their enthusiasm and in the ardor of investigation. You will become acquainted with all the various branches of present day knowledge—science, history, art, literature and kindred studies. See that you make the most of your opportunities.

"It should ever be the aim of the college to develop all the powers of a man in body, mind and soul. It should develop his body, should teach him to think clearly and rightly, and to act truly. The college should awaken the man to the high responsibilities and duties of life. Education is more than mere knowledge and the power to apply it."

President Granville made an earnest plea for clean living and activities along all profitable lines, and the announcements for the actual work of the year followed the close of this formal address.

WILL ASK COUNTY WOMEN FOR FACTS

Want to Find what are the Conditions that Make Life Unpleasant for the Farmer's Wife Will Send out Many Letters.

Twenty Adams county women will, within the next week or ten days, receive letters from David F. Houston, Secretary of Agriculture, requesting that they give information to the Department of Agriculture which has been sent to the needs of the farm women. With each letter will be supplied a return envelope in which the questions have been carefully answered.

This inquiry results from the receipt of a letter addressed to the Secretary in which the writer said in part: "The farm woman has been the most neglected factor in the rural problem and she has been especially neglected by the national Department of Agriculture."

Following the receipt of this letter, the Secretary determined that the best way for the Department to learn how to give these women the fullest possible aid and service which their important place in agricultural production warrants, was to write to the women themselves and ask them to make their own suggestions.

In the letter these women are invited to give individual answers to the letter or to discuss the matter in their church societies or other organizations and submit answers representing the combined opinions of the women in their entire communities. The answers will be carefully studied by the Department and this date is set because it will give the women time and the Department to consider the matter and discuss it with their woman neighbors.

The letter will be sent to twenty leading farms in each of the twenty-eight leading counties in the United States. Their answers, it is expected, will include the views of a total number of upwards of 500,000 farm women. These answers will be carefully considered by the Department and the department having to do with that branch of agriculture.

FOR DISMISSAL

West Chester School Trustees Would Dismiss Dr. Phillips.

Many Adams County teachers will be interested to learn of the action taken by the trustees of the State Normal School of West Chester State Normal school when they announced the resignation of the principal, Dr. George Norris Phillips, to take effect at the close of the year.

The requesting of Dr. Phillips' resignation from the position that he had held since 1881 was the result of a careful report of the board of investigators, that they had appointed to investigate the actions that had been reported against Dr. Phillips. Governor Tener, S. Johnson, who disappeared on July 15 is the same man that Ruth Watt, a former graduate, left her home near Hanover.

The investigating board has been working for the past three weeks and during that time nearly 100 men have examined many witnesses and the almost all of these testified that Dr. Phillips had some knowledge as to the alleged misconduct of the former steward now under arrest on the charge of the institution.

At the meeting on Sept. 8, Dr. Phillips listened to the reading of the report by Chairman Darlington of the board. The conclusion made a denial of some of the testimony that had been given to the investigators.

Dr. Phillips, who is well known all over the state, has been connected with the faculty of the State Normal School for 32 years and has always stood high in the estimation of the trustees and the state department of public instruction.

GREAT TRIP TO THE APPLE BELT

State Fruit Growers Delighted with Tour of Adams County's Great Apple Region. Many Orchards Visited on Auto Run.

The second day program of the summer meeting of the Pennsylvania State Horticultural Society, consisted of a forty mile automobile run through a portion of the apple belt of Adams County with stops at some of the orchards.

Thirty machines carrying one hundred and forty one passengers left the Gettysburg Country Club at 9:30 W. Pricket in the pilot car. The route lay out the Mummasburg road to Mt. Alto. Keller's orchard where a short stop was made viewing his old trees. Special interest centered in his tree of winter banana apples.

From there the route lay via the orchards of Daniel Motter Estate, George Bream and John Bell to Cashtown where a stop was made to see H. L. Hamm's tree of Jonathans. After a half hour spent here the tour continued via Hilltown past orchards of Sheely Brothers, Benjamin Bergstresser and Lewis Knee down into Arendtsville where among the fine young plantings of Jacob Taylor, James Hoffman and Jacob Bream were visited in succession. Continuing through Arendtsville down the macadam road to Biglerville, the tour passed orchards of A. L. Weikert, Charles E. Raffensperger and Thomas L. Minter.

Special attention was called to the fine young orchard of Raffensperger and his complete and excellent system of propping. Turning to the left at Biglerville the Newville road the machines passed the orchards of Raffensperger Bros., Professor Hoffman, Samuel Bream and W. H. Rosenstiel, the latter having one of the orchard of Eli Garrettson. After a thorough examination of his beautiful trees the party left the machines and went on to the orchard of C. S. Criest's, Biglerville's mayor. The last orchard on route Mr. Criest's orchard was gone over in detail and comments were frequent on the excellence and perfection of the apples which filled to profusion all the trees.

The next stop was at the orchard of J. W. Prickett and an inspection of his packing house located in the centre of the 112 acre tract. Noodle dinner at the Newville road the machines passed the orchards of Raffensperger Bros., Professor Hoffman, Samuel Bream and W. H. Cornelius Baker sustained several fractures of the skull and died several days after the struggle, the other two men were not seriously hurt.

Bosserman, at that time twenty six years of age, was brought to Gettysburg and then removed to the insane asylum at Harrisburg. A charge of murder was preferred against him following Mr. Baker's death but it was never pressed and the man was cared for at Harrisburg ever since.

TROUBLE ABOUT NEW MEMORIAL

Plan which Defeated Lincoln Way Project Likely to Get into Trouble because Bids Show that Cost will be too High.

On account of the diversified and intricate character of 17 bids submitted to the Lincoln Memorial Commission, for the construction of the $2,500,000 memorial to be erected at Washington, at the bands of the Potomac River, the Commission has deferred action until the proposals until September 25. This plan caused the defeat of the project for a Lincoln Memorial Road at Washington to Gettysburg.

The lowest bidder for the superstructure, exclusive of the statue of Lincoln and the decorative work, was the George A. Fuller Company, of New York, at $1,694,000. At this figure the company offered to build the memorial of either Mount Airy granite, dorset white marble or Pavonia (Vermont) marble.

The lowest bidder for the foundation work was Charles Fath & Co., of Cleveland, at $270,000. The highest bidder for the superstructure was John Gill & Co., of Cleveland, at $1,916,000, and for the foundation, Morrow Brothers, of Baltimore, at $442,000. Proposals for the statue and lining were not comprised a great diversity of estimates.

The commission made no secret of the fact that they considered all the bids high. It was pointed out, that any of the proposals were accepted it would be impossible to complete the memorial within the $2,000,000 authorized by Congress.

Numerous Excursion Booked for the Coming Weeks. Big Colored Excursion Monday. Toptun Day at the Usual Time.

Indications point to a busy tourist season in Gettysburg this fall and, from the numerous bookings already made, the usual autumn crowds may be expected.

Sunday, September 14, the Pennsylvania Railroad will bring in a special train from Hanover and vicinity, the number anticipated being 1000. The Pennsylvania is also booked to run excursions from Harrisburg here over the Reading instead of taking them around by way of Hanover and then coming from there over the West Shore. On Wednesday, September 14, another excursion is booked from Norristown, with the expected number replaced at 500.

On Saturday, September 27, the Swarlsord party of Philadelphia will make its annual visit to Gettysburg, during the 24 hours there will be the customary number of small parties and personally conducted tours from the New England States, New York and Philadelphia, the bookings of which have not been closed with the railroads.

Sunday, October 5, the Central Railroad of New Jersey will send an excursion train here from Rockaway Beach.

Toptun Day, always one of the biggest events of the fall, has not yet been announced but the custom is to choose the Saturday nearest October 15 and this would place the event for this year on October 14 when it can reasonably be supposed the people from the Mummasburg region will be here by the twinkends.

END OF SEASON

St. James Takes Second Place in Sunday School League.

Friday evening marked the close of this year's Sunday School League when St. James Lutheran Presbyterian nines battled for second place honors, the Lutherans winning by the score of 3 to 0. It was one of the best games of the season.

St. James' victory gives them second place for two of the three years in which Sunday school base ball has flourished in Gettysburg. In 1910 the pennant was won by the Catholics while St. James second. The Catholics led by one full game and the schedule called for another game with St. James. The managers failed to get together on a date and the game was never played.

There was no Sunday School base ball in 1911, and in 1912 the Reformed's also won the pennant with the Catholics and St. James tie for second place. The Lutherans defeated St. James twice in a nine inning game and secured second place honors. The Catholic victory this year gives them two firsts.

Friday evening's game was featured by the pitching of Howard Hartzell, the last member of the Hartzell family to occupy the pitcher's box. He held the heavy Presbyterian hitters safe and will be a big help for him in next year's series. Allison made a fine comeback and hit which was a good as anything the League produced during the season. Errors were largely responsible for St. James' defeat while the Presbyterians, weakened by the loss of Ira Plank, were sure dangerous.

LONG SEARCH FINDS OWNER

Prof. Sowers Reaches Owner of Cast Found here in July Living in Nebraska. Discovered Owner through his Tailor.

An echo of the battle anniversary celebration in July was heard Monday morning when Prof. J. Louis Sowers received a letter from Lincoln, Nebraska. The letter established him as the owner of a cast which Pluck, Bell and Sixth found during the week of the anniversary. The Gettysburg citizen has been searching for its owner ever since he found the garment.

Mr. Pluck could not carry an identification card in his coat and there was no document of any sort to prove the ownership. On the afternoon of July Third while a party of friends had stopped at Prof. Sowers' home on the Fairfield Road to get a drink of water and, while there, he hung his coat on the fence. He went away and returned later to get his coat when which could not be taken out Confederate money, on account of the resolutions. When he came back he forgot entirely about the coat and left it there. Some more of it until he was getting so his train. Then it was too late to return for it. Since then a journey home had to be made in coaches style.

Prof. Sowers at once started to hunt the owner. A badge indicated that he was a member of the 25th Ohio infantry but inquiry through Grand Army men failed to elicit any information. Finally Mr. Sowers saw the name of the tailor in the inside of the pocket. He communicated with him in far away Nebraska and the tailor in turn conferred with Nebraska's representative on the anniversary arrangements. Indeed Mr. Meyer and Prof. Sowers received a letter from the veterans describing the coat and giving a remittance in expression of his appreciation for the long search made to find the owner.

Autumn Arbor Day will be Friday, October 24.

State Superintendent of Public Instruction Nathan C. Schaeffer has issued the annual Arbor Day proclamation designating Friday, October 24, as "Autumn Arbor Day."

In his proclamation Dr. Schaeffer says: "Autumn is the best time for the planting of trees and says:

"Trees are our friends. They protect us from the glare of the sun in summer and shield us from the chilly blasts of winter. They beautify the streets of our towns and cities. They are the ornaments of our landscape. They clothe our hilltops and hundreds of thousands of these noble trees do not attain their growth in a day. The fullness of years is theirs. From an acorn or a nut they grow to maturity in the span of a human life. Many of the trees that delight poted by as are dear to the foresight of our fathers and grandfathers. They planted trees that we might be benefited. Let us pass on to those who follow that which has been handed down to us. Let us be unselfishness of our forebearers, but with the same spirit of love for trees and fruit trees.

"In this spirit and in accordance with established custom, Friday, October 24, is hereby designated and set aside as Autumn Arbor Day. I do earnestly urged that the teachers and pupils of the public schools, directors of this commonwealth, with an appropriate regard for the observance of the coming generations, will observe this day by the planting of trees and with suitable exercises."

SENATE PASSES THE TARIFF BILL

Measure Goes Through Body by Vote of 44 to 37.

NOW GOES TO CONFERENCE

All the Features for Which President Wilson Has Contended Are Carried by the Bill, Including Free Wool, Free Sugar and Free Meats.

Washington, Sept. ——The Underwood-Simmons tariff bill passed the senate by a vote of 44 to 37.

It went through everything all the factions by which President Wilson has contended—free wool, free sugar, free meats and greatly reduced duties on all of the necessaries of life. The result was a great personal victory for Woodrow Wilson, and he was showered with messages of congratulation.

The bill now goes to conference between the two houses, and ten days is an expected will be taken action on this important measure, which already has changed itself into a different shape.

No vote in the senate was big with political possibilities.

Two Democrats, La Follette, of Wisconsin, and Poindexter, of Washington, voted for the Democratic bill only two Democrats, Thornton and Brandegee, of Louisiana, refused to stand by the caucus pledge. They voted with most of the Republicans against the measure.

Many Democratic leaders contended that to this action La Follette had removed himself from the Democratic party and had forfeited any chance he may have had for nomination for the presidency. Nobody was certain what La Follette's plans were, but the Republican leaders in the senate maintained that he is preparing to lead an independent ticket in 1916, and they were confident that he was getting ready to jump into the field. Whether his defection was still further emphasized by an obvious friendship between him and Senator Cummins, one of the Republican progressives, the Republicans leaders obtained a larger majority for the bill than they had expected. There was due not only to the votes of La Follette and Poindexter, but to the absence of three Republicans two of whom, Senators Gallinger, of New Hampshire Cronna, of North Dakota, released their Democratic pairs on the final vote in order that they might have the satisfaction of recording themselves in favor of the party measure.

So intense was the interest in the proceedings that even when the vote was presaged announced that the bill had passed galleries broke out in the floor of the senate on the Democratic side, and the occupants of the galleries plucking up courage at its example violated a time-honored rule forbidding such demonstrations.

On the floor John Sharp Williams, of Mississippi; Senator Thomas, of Colorado, and other members of the finance committee sat up and clapped their hands in exultation, while some of the older senators, like Senator Bacon, of Georgia, sat with more or less astonishment.

Immediately after the announcement that the bill had been passed, Senator Gallinger, chairman of the Republican caucus and by virtue of that office actually leader of the minority, arose, and in a brief but feliticitous speech expressing his appreciation of the treatment that had been accorded to the minority side by Senator Simmons, chairman of the finance committee.

After the announcement that the bill had been passed Chairman Simmons arose and for the benefit most of the senators who had not been present and another big surprise was afforded when the bill was published that a letter La Follette, of Wisconsin, who had just voted for the bill as one of the Republican conferees Senator La Follette was entitled to the place on the ground of seniority, so he is the last member on the list of Republican conferees on the finance committee.

The seven senators named to represent the senate on the conference committee of the two houses that will perfect the bill were as follows:

Chairman Simmons, Senators Stone, Williams and Johnson, Democrats, and Senators Cummins, Gallinger and La Follette, Republicans.

The last day there in the tariff bill in the senate was consumed mostly by speech making. Senators La Follette and Cummins made the principal speeches and one of the directing incidents of the debate was an open handshaking in the senate of Mr. La Follette of his ill feeling toward the senator from Iowa, which had dated back to the last presidential campaign.

Senate Tariff Changes.

The grim-jest changes made by the senate in the Underwood tariff bill as it passed the house are:

Income tax exemptions reduced to $3,000, with allowance of $1,000 for husband or wife and $1,000 for two or more children.

Tax on cotton futures of 8/9 cents a bale, effective after Sept. 1, 1913.

Cattle and wheat added to free list as well as meats and flour.

Meat inspection being required at small farm slaughter houses.

Bananas taxed one-tenth of a cent a pound.

Brandies for fortifying pure wood

AIDED TARIFF BILL

Senator Brannon Called Deathly Le Follette Made Last Speech.

During the long debate in the senate on the tariff bill no one member of the house has been guided to a large degree by Senator Simmons of North Carolina, democratic chairman of finance committee. Senator Simmons has been the leader of the democrats in the senate and now as the democrats to get the bill out of the senate. Senator La Follette declared the last speech on the bill and made an address very complimentary to Senator Simmons and the Payne-Aldrich act.

wines, heretofore free, taxed $1.10 a gallon.

Income anti-dumping provision repealing grade to be sold in the United States at same grade as sold abroad; producers stricken out and the prohibition on countervailing duties on such goods modified.

Creation of a joint committee to revise administration features.

Provision for a new countervailing duty on wood pulp stricken out.

Free art provisions of house bill made more restrictive.

Maximum corporation rate is decreased twenty-eight per cent from existing rates.

New tariff rates will cost government $44,000,000 less in revenue.

PRESIDENT WILSON PLEASED

Says Fight for the People Has at Last Been Won.

Washington, Sept. 10.—President Wilson was soon at hand of the passage of the tariff bill by the senate. He issued the following:

"A fight for the people and for free government has at last been won. Senate and house conferees will promptly act on the measure in accord with the program of which the senate has already given ample evidence that it is ready to accept. The senate has not only accepted the house bill as the basis of action, but has adopted the house rates in all but a very few items. There is no room for delay. There is no reason why the conferees should hesitate. There is no reason why they should not report to both houses of congress in such a way as to make it possible to act upon their report without delay.

"There is no reason to believe but that the conferees will be carried through all real energy, directness and single purpose to the speedy accomplishment of the task. In doing this first session of the present congress will have passed three measures which an unrivaled public interest has made it necessary to expedite—the special legislation for the devoted, the currency bill and the tariff bill. Mr. Underwood and Mr. Simmons and the democratic members of the senate

45 HURT IN WRECK OF PENNSY FLYER

St. Louis-New York Train Jumps Track at Wyjas, O.

WAS RUNNING AT HIGH SPEED

That No Lives Were Lost in Wreck is Due to Fact that It Was an All Steel Tra—Loosened Rail Blamed.

New Madison, O., Sept. —The New York, St. Louis flyer on the Pennsylvania railroad was derailed at Wyjas station, five miles west of here, killing forty-five or seventy-five passengers and fatally injuring three of the crew.

The coaches went into a cornfield on one side of the track, the engine and tender rolling like a bolder embankment on the other side of the track and turning one span of the bridge into the air.

The rear coach remained on the rails, and the next coach, though off the track, did not overturn.

The following is a partial list of injured:

L. E. Redden, New York; Mrs. Jessamin K. Owen, St. Louis; H. C. Sawyer, Indianapolis; W. Somerville, St. Louis; C. W. Hall, Indianapolis; W. F. Fretz, New York city; A. T. Hawkwell, Boston; Mrs. W. F. Booker, dining car steward, Columbus, O.; R. Rice, Indianapolis; Thomas O. J. W. Grain, Brooklyn, Columbus, O.; R. J. Cox, Columbus; Mrs. Mary M. H. Sheeler, Brooklyn; Jesse Porter, Jersey City; Mrs. H. L. Goodman, Washington, D. C.

The fireman was badly scalded and crushed it is believed that will die and a child in the diner was seriously scalded.

The enginemen suffered a severe shaking up.

The wreck occurred at the point where the track was weak and the train was traveling at high speed.

The train consisted of North Tonawanda, Ind., on a relief train and the last car was the first to leave the track.

Because of absence of telegraph communication with Wyjas, it was not at last report possible to ascertain the injured, but some of the farmers living near the scene of the wreck acted as doctors and nurses, saying that many were slightly hurt.

The train passed through New Madison at 10:30 o'clock and was on time when it left Greenville, 10 miles west of the scene of the wreck.

The train was composed of a mail car, baggage car, four coaches, a dining car, observation car, four sleepers, a steel and observation.

The train was known as the New York, St. Louis limited. It left Greenville fifty minutes late. It was one of the fastest passenger trains on the Pennsylvania lines. There is no title to the wreck, which is said to be caused by a broken rail.

Because of the fact the news of the wreck was some time reaching New Madison, the wreck occurred.

The train was in charge of Conductor Hall, of Columbus, and Engineer E. Rogers, both of Columbus.

The engine left the track on one side, and the coaches immediately in the rear of the engine turned to the other side and plowed into a corn field, thus escaping the wreckage of the Pennsylvania offices.

Conductor Hall and the doctors, who rushed to the scene from Richmond, Ind., were taken to Richmond in a relief. Wreck trains were sent from Richmond and Greenville to the scene of the wreck.

The cause of the wreck is not known yet, but is supposed to have been the spreading of the rails, and the train was traveling sixty miles an hour when it left the rails.

It is the latest report is that all the injured will recover, physicians say.

General Manager W. M. Clark, Superintendent Atterbury and Superintendent Lee, of Columbus, left Columbus for the scene of the wreck on a special train.

Settles Down to Spend Next Six Months in Canada.

Cochrane, Ont., Sept. —Harry K. Thaw, the fugitive from justice, has settled down to a monotonous six months' wait until the next step in his court proceedings instituted in an effort to prevent his deportation is taking to Montreal.

That Thaw does not have much hope of getting bail, nor does he know when he will be relieved from the custody of Immigration Officer T. B. Williams, who is in charge of the deportation of immigration's interests, said, however, he expected instructions from Ottawa soon.

After his breakfast Thaw started opening and reading his mail. He received more letters than any person in Cochrane, most of his letters coming from sympathizers or plain cranks with suggestions to make. An average morning's mail is fifty letters, postal cards and packages.

Harry Thaw's vanity is noted the amount of public attention he is attracting, and he has hired a personal secretary, to whom he dictates replies to the sympathetic letters.

The case against "Educated Roger" Thompson, the chauffeur who drove Thaw away from Matteawa and who is charged with harboring a criminal fugitive, will be called in Sherbrooke on September 16, when it will receive final disposition then.

GERMAN AIRSHIP MEETS DISASTER

Sixteen of Its Crew of 22 Men Were Drowned.

Berlin, Sept. ——The worst of the numerous disasters which have overtaken Germany's airship fleet befell the naval dirigible L-2 when her passenger ship L-1 was wrecked while on a voyage from the mainland to Heligoland twelve miles away, and sixteen of the crew of twenty-two were drowned.

This is the twelfth accident to befall the Zeppelin airships and the first to be accompanied with loss of life.

It has been possible only to piece together the L-2's story from the fragmentary accounts given by those who managed to be joined by two waterplanes which were sent to her assistance. All the eyewitnesses to Heligoland from which also many spectators watched the ship's descent to Danzig, returning to Heligoland, refuse to be interviewed by way of Potsdam and Hamburg.

It is understood that some officers of high rank were on board the L-2, but the only names mentioned in the early reports are Lieutenant Metzler, the commander, and Captain von Metzing of the engine room, who were both drowned.

The main facts of the catastrophe are officially confirmed, but there are many details which are lacking.

CLEAR ROAD FOR CURRENCY BILL

Measure Reported to House From Banking Committee.

DECLARE AGAINST ALDRICH PLAN

Chairman Underwood Has Assured President Wilson Measure Will Have Right of Way in House and Will Be Ready for Senate as Soon as Tariff is Through.

Washington, Sept. —Over W. Underwood, democratic majority leader, told President Wilson that plain sailing is ahead for the administration currency bill.

It is now planned by the house and senate leaders, he explained, to have the bill ready for the senate by the time the conference committee is through with the tariff bill, which will be in a nut-two weeks' time.

In the senate the senate will take a week's recess, after which the committee will continue with its efforts on the currency b ll.

Accompanied by a unanimous report, in which the principles of the new bill were outlined and defended, the Glass currency measure was formally made ready to be taken up by the house, a measure for technicality, declared that the administration bill would make impossible future panics and disasters. It pleaded that under the federal reserve system $150,000,000 would be added to the national money supply for use in case of emergency.

Attacking the Aldrich currency plan as impossible in this country, the report declared that three "simple and practical propositions" were necessary for a satisfactory currency system. These, the report declared, were:

Creation of a joint stock corporation for the extension of credit to banks which possess such credit but which are unable to liquidate them to meet legitimate demands upon their cash reserves.

Provision for better extension of American banking facilities in foreign countries to the end that our trade may be enlarged and that American business men abroad may obtain the accommodations they require.

Ultimate retirement of the present bank note circulation and the partial provision for the fulfillment of governmental obligations by substituting supplied with a suitable flexible currency based on commercial paper.

"Beyond these cardinal and wise propositions, the committee does not deem it wise at this time to make recommendations as to the control of policies," the report declared.

"The committee is undesirable to prove that the transfer of gold from national to central reserve banks of member banks will not disturb commerce.

FLAWS IN CURRENCY BILL

Republican Members of House Condemn Pillsbury Measure.

Washington, Sept. —Three vital objections to the Glass currency bill were found by the republican members of the house banking and currency committee, according to a report published. They were:

The compulsory purchase of federal reserve bank stock by national banks, amounting to confiscation of value of government obligations. Unlimited power bestowed upon the federal reserve board by the provisions of the bill.

"We regret that the majority members of the committee have not thought by course action that they could not have accomplished the end at which, if adopted, would have effual the most serious defect in the proposed provision," the report declared. "Such changes, while important, relate to a number, are fundamental and vital."

The report made a strong statement that "other minor imperfections in the bill" can be pointed out on the floor of the house.

TASTY AND NUT EXPERIMENTS

Leftovers of Both Meat and Vegetable May Be Used in the Preparation of Salmon.

Here is a way to use up your cooked, cold meat:

Cut in small bits, mix with cold boiled rice or even hominy grits or breakfast. Use equal amounts of the meat and rice; season to taste with salt, pepper, onion and parsley or a little mint sauce. Moisten slightly with some white sauce and egg yolk, roll up in lettuce leaves or tender young cabbage leaves, tie securely and cook gently for an hour in little soup broth or water. Make and arrange on a dish and pour around a sauce made of one cup of milk, a tablespoonful of butter and flour, a little salt and pepper to taste and a teaspoonful of minced parsley, a little lemon juice. Serve hot. A nice way to stand on the fire after eating and make delicious hash. Whatever meat is used, or even boiled beef, a few slices of cold ham, or even some extraordinary white sauce, adding fresh parsley and a hard-boiled egg instead of the lemon juice and sea.

FROSTED RICE FOR HOT DAY

Few Desserts Will So Please Supporter to This Wheat in Its Property.

Cook a cupful of rice in a pint of boiling water until dry, then add a pint of milk, a tablespoonful of butter, the grated rind of a lemon and the juice of half of it, a cupful of sugar, a pudding dish and pour in the mixture; bake until the rice is firm, then beat the whites of the eggs until stiff with a cupful of powdered sugar and a tablespoonful of lemon juice; spread over the top of the rice pudding and then very slowly until the meringue has set and turned a delicate brown before brown color; close all the draughts or the oven and if possible leave the door open, as all meringues must be cooked very slowly or they will more than a crying feast.—Emma Paddock Telford in Boston Herald.

Last of the Hun.

The last of the hun has many possessions. Still, he has a few left. Among all the meat that it will yield for nine months, Armour has left in the cellars over the fire in a bottle of cold water and cook until the water is hot. Then add about half dozen, add about two tablespoonfuls of butter and a little salt. When cold, remove any skin, cut the eggs in halves lengthwise, remove the yolks and mash to a paste, put through the chopper twice and add to the yolks a teaspoonful of dry mustard and two tablespoonfuls of vinegar. Cook to a double boiler for ten minutes. Make in fine the whites of eggs and spread cold for supper or made the dressing for a salad.

Put a Plug on Work Apron Pockets.

Out of town, where a woman may wear a work apron all day and not be seen at this lovely season, it pays to put a strong plug with two big pockets, one with a flap, which may be buttoned down when the wearer wants to keep a little change in any pocket or wants to carry a few extra tradesmen. Now, it is quite safe and easy to put the money where it will be out of harm's way and thimble, in the other pocket I have found very useful before I made such aprons I was constantly losing my thimble out of my pockets, as I stooped over my work.—Exchange.

Southern Waffles.

Two cupfuls of flour, three tablespoonfuls of sugar, three teaspoonfuls separately, one and one-half cupfuls milk, half a cupful melted butter, two level teaspoonfuls salt, one tablespoonful melted butter, two teaspoonfuls baking powder and rose and nutmeg to taste, if desired, and two eggs needed. Cook the meal in the boiling milk, then add immediately the flour, then the milk, sugar, the flour, baking powder and salt, then the eggs well beaten, then by stir in the yolks of the eggs well beaten, then the melted butter and the stiffly beaten whites of the eggs. Fry on hot, well greased waffle iron.

Almond Jumbles.

Three cupfuls of fine sugar, two cupfuls of flour, half a cupful of butter, two eggs, one cupful of almonds, the five eggs well beaten, two tablespoonfuls of rose water, one teaspoonful of a pound of almonds blanched and chopped fine, and a little sprinkling of soda dissolved in boiling water.

Roll out thin and cut in rounds, put in the beaten yolks, milk, flour, rose water, almonds and soda, the beaten whites, very lightly and quickly. Drop in cakes on buttered pans and bake.

About Crepe Waists.

When a waist is made of crepe one will be easy to wash it is to use a very thin starch and dry it in the sun. Then iron on the wrong side.

Don't wring it, as this makes the cloth thin and streaky. Instead of the manner, crepe will look very well.

Rhubarb Shortcake.

Make a rich short crust and bake in a shallow pudding or baking pan; when half, split open, butter and spread with half with well sweetened rhubarb which has been boiled, mix on the other, and serve with whipped cream.

Country Salad.

Use cress white lettuce leaves, chicory and endive, mixed with a dressing of four slices of cucumbers. Pour over it a French dressing of mayonnaise.

THAW ATTORNEYS AFRAID OF EVIDENCE

Won't Ask For Pardon Upon Grounds Being Placed at His Door.

THE REAL FIGHT TODAY

Coleicroft, N. H., Sept. 12—The arrangement of liberty for Thaw on the charge of being a fugitive from justice was practically settled today by an agreement between District Attorney Jerome and the New York state representatives and Thaw's attorneys.

The agreement is subject to the delay in the receipt of the application of extradition from the governor's office at Albany.

There was not in court, but was paraded down Main street to the office of his local counsel, Attorney A. Lobo son. He was guarded by deputy sheriffs, the sheriff not wishing to excite people, but there was no disorder.

John Lawyer, formerly deputies in New York city, who raced with Jerome all the way to Sherbrooke, Quebec, after Thaw arrest in the Dominion, arrived in Coleicroft by next morning. Lawyer is he been made a special at Montreal from Matteawan, and he is waiting opportunity to get his hands on Thaw and start with him direct for the New York line.

Mr. Jerome, former district attorney of New York, who is in Colebrook as a special assistant attorney general of the state of New York, said that the extradition proceedings would be completed with the utmost dispatch. "We will try to imitate Canadian celerity," said Jerome. "We shall not allow quibbling to interfere with the delivery of Thaw back to the lunatic asylum where he belongs."

In fact Mr. Jerome indicated strongly that he had assurances from Governor-elect Samuel Felker of New Hampshire, and Attorney-General James H. Tuttle, of that state, that they would be no delay in giving the fugitive a hearing before the extradition proceedings.

Both lawyers, Jerome and Kenedy, were indignant at the action of the Canadian authorities in letting out Thaw over the border. "We had no hidden ax of it," said Jerome, "and we think it was a high handed piece of work. It was another blow at Thaw, a brutality to the state of New York. Memphis, Tenn., Sept. 12—Arrests based on affidavits in the possession of Deputy Sheriff Will H. Kelsea, it is stated that other guards, too, all near the door of the jail opposite places in rocking chairs just outside the room, the door of which was ajar and a light was kept burning in the hall night. They were fearful of what is called "strong arm work." Jerome's presence filled them with terror. The ownership taste of liberty with its license clothed with responsibilities, left him trusting entirely to counsel and making few assumptions.

Thaw himself does not know, except in one sense, the identity of the person who caused him to be sat down over the line at Norton Mills. The man who does know is Agent Parkhurst, chief of the Canadian secret service, and it was at Parkhurst's head that Thaw hurled the heavy glass tumbler.

SAYS SULZER IS NOT GOVERNOR

New York Justice Sustains Action of Legislature.

FIRST DECISION IN CASE

Albany, N. Y., Sept. 12—The state assembly acted legally when it voted to impeach Governor William Sulzer on the morning of June 18, and after the articles of impeachment were adopted by a majority vote of the members present, the court has not the prerogatives of the chief executive of New York state were transferred automatically from Governor Sulzer to Lieutenant-Governor Martin H. Glynn, who remains as acting governor until the senate passes upon the charges preferred against the governor.

These conclusions were voiced in the opinion rendered given by Attorney-General Thomas Carmody, city attorney of State Michael May and agrees with Mr. Carmody in every point of law set forth by the attorney general, decides that the impeachment proceedings is judicial and not legislative in character and for the reason the assembly could convene of itself at any time to impeach Governor Sulzer for offenses against the governor.

The opinion were voiced in the habeas corpus proceedings instituted in the court of appeals by city authorities to honor Governor Sulzer's pardon of Joseph Robin, the negro gambler, who, Justice Hardwick held that Governor Sulzer had the constitutional right to grant the pardon, quashed the writ and remanded Robin to the New York county penitentiary on Black wells Island. This is the first decision made by any court on the legality of the impeachment of Governor Sulzer and paved Sulzer to continue to exercise executive functions.

"It is urged," says Justice Hasbrouck, "that the power to impeach when the assembly could consider the subject of impeachment was when the body was in session, and in other words having once adjourned sine die in an act, it has no power to impeach for what hideous act or crime or misdemeanor it may be guilty of to set the machinery in motion for impeachment until he seated day of the meeting of the next session. The constitution has no such branches of the legislature and of the governor, and no such limit can be enacted. The power conferred on the assembly to impeach the governor is a judicial power.

"The exercise of the powers of our rulers in the assembly as regards the impeachment of the governor is great. It is the orchestra and final judge of the assembly has the power at the discretion to impeach.

"These considerations lead to the conclusion that the governor has been legally and constitutionally impeached."

After the departure of Werner minister Sipes's wife-to-be was in the chilling chase after him clear into York, where all parties were found at the end of Werner's proprietorship after strenuous days and nights.

Homer, while in the midst of the chase, remembered that he was to be married. To his consternation it was forcibly suggested to him that he was not only to be married and that the bride-to-be was already on the way to the church. Homer guests were trying to console her.

FARLEY-STRIKE BREAKER-DIES

Man Who Made Fortune in Ending Molders Strikes Passes Away.

Plattsburg, N. Y., Sept. 12.—James Farley, 70 years old, died at his home here from tuberculosis.

He was born in Ireland, but in the latter years of his life, when he had made a fortune by breaking molders' moulding strikes, he devoted himself to charity. He built a hospital here and race track to die two weeks ago.

Farley came to this country and early gives the credit of starting the "breaking" business. Shortly after he left Malone, N. Y., where he had been working at the moulding trade, became manager of an up-state foundry. He broke the strike of the brooklyn Rapid Transit company's car barn employees and emerged in 1886 as leader of the moulders' strike which broke the Brooklyn car strike.

His success in Brooklyn was then fame and to city after city where labor troubles existed he was called in similar work until his business of breaking strikes became nationwide and property developed into a syndicate which includes that of breaking the terror of strike agitators.

Farley left an estate worth rich as his newly created business.

DeBAUCH ENDS EXCURSION DAY

Over Seven Thousand Negroes here, Many of them Hold over Monday Morning. Woman Shot, Man Robbed and Other Sensations.

One woman shot as the result of a drunken brawl, three persons injured in a trolley accident caused by an intoxicated motorman, an officer assaulted by a mob of fifty negroes, a citizen robbed of $15, numerous fights and a score of general disorder made the 5:30 Tuesday morning when the Western Maryland started on their homeward way the last of the 7246 colored excursionists with the road dumped into Gettysburg on Monday.

It is doubtful if any excursion ever run to the town has been productive of wide-spread and openly expressed indignation which was evinced in Gettysburg Monday evening when the throng of negroes, hundreds of them partially or entirely under the influence of liquor, thronged the town and created a condition of affairs that every citizen who was unfortunate enough to see it.

It was not until after three o'clock Monday afternoon that the Western Maryland left in the last of its eight trainloads of people and at seven o'clock in the evening, the greater part of the people still here, it was announced that all the trains had left and there would be no further way of getting to Baltimore until the specials could be run back to make a second trip. All night long many of the people had to stand, as the waiting room was turned into an uncomfortable cold, free room for those who took out of newspapers, boxes, crates or anything the unfortunate negroes could gather. Huddled in the aisle of these places they made themselves as comfortable as possible, about half past five Tuesday morning the last trainload pulled out and the sorry affair had come to an end.

That the Western Maryland could not accommodate the crowds and not be able to get them back is explained by the fact that at Baltimore in the morning a mob of almost 9000 negroes appeared to be waiting for Gettysburg. Even though the road had borrowed cars from the Reading they did not have sufficient to take them and about 1500 were left behind. The majority managed to get into Gettysburg into the cars, as many as 125 getting into a coach. The second here after a most uncomfortable ride and, when time came to leave, refused to get in again in the same coaches.

Woman Shot In Fight

The most serious affair of the entire day and night was the shooting of Clara Brown, a negress, a Baltimore negress who was seriously injured in a fight in the basement of the Hotel Gettysburg. The woman had been lifted out for the excursionists, the first with improved facilities and the second as a bar.

About six o'clock in the evening many men and women were seated at the tables when the crowd in the bar started jostling each other about and finally got into a free-for-all fight in which bottles and glasses were thrown about and wild confusion resulted. The bar tenders retreated and in the melee one of the negroes pulled a revolver, stepping from the bar into the other room, and shooting directly at the Brown woman.

The shot entered over the right kidney and went through her body, a probe showing it to have lodged above the left breast. It is not known whether the aim was deliberate and intentional or whether the man, as yet not caught, knew her and shot directly at her. It is said that they had engaged in a quarrel earlier in the day on Carlisle street.

The assailant, a slender light brown man, fled and other negroes carried the bleeding woman up Baltimore street to the jail, crowds of people following and the affair generally creating excitement. Dr. Dalbey, the jail physician, was summoned and the injured woman made as comfortable as possible. She spent a restless night and is in a serious condition to-day.

Three Injured

The three persons injured in the trolley accident during the afternoon were all able to go home. Their injuries were slight. A drunken pedestrian, pulling the ball rope, caused the motorman to stop until a rear-end collision resulted and the fact that more were not seriously injured was due to the careful manner in which the motorman were pressed. The cars escaped damage.

Officer Sheads was mobbed by a large crowd of negroes at the Western Maryland station during the day. He had ordered a man he saw a man strike a woman with sufficient force to knock her down and was about to place him under arrest when fifty or more rushed at him and upon the Western Maryland detectives Company, Burnett and Davis hurried to his aid, and, with enough violence, managed to get him away together with one of the ring-leaders in the attempt to prevent the arrest of the original assailant, who escaped.

Had Pocket Picked

Robert King, of Hunterstown, was in the Washington House about seven o'clock in the evening when he was suddenly given a shove by a small negro who quickly reached into Mr. King's pocket, drew out a purse containing $30 and made a dash for the door. The whole affair was over in the space of a few seconds and, before the victim could give chase, the negro, at bad gotten a good start down the Western Maryland tracks towards Straban street. King followed yelling "Pickpocket!" and a crowd joined in the pursuit but the negro had gotten a good start and, in the rapidly falling darkness, got away with his booty.

Local officers quelled many fights during the day and had several arrests counters with pickpockets. One fight on Carlisle street was stopped when Officers Wilson and Sheeler dashed in and caught a man f.ashing a razor, but the combatants had managed to use the blade a time in the air. Burgess Hoke Herbert was about to act, but when several excursionists made a rush for the weapon and got away with it.

Officers Sheeler and Emmon picked up a drunken negro who was creating considerable disorder, in this case a prevalent one, but when they started Harnish and committed to jail for Court trial.

Hard Task

The crowd which did not start its real speakeasies until about 1 in the afternoon was almost too much for the local force of police officers.

During the afternoon District Attorney Swope, Detective Sergeant Leonard Trop, next Constable Sheeler and three deputies out to the "Hill," but to return, as the terror of Adams men could not cope with the 2000 there and the big watermelon patch.

With all the unpleasant features of the day and night it had its humorous aspects, the best of which occurred in half past two in the morning when one big buck negro, a member of the 24th Western Maryland station remarked to an early-waking citizen that he "gwine to cause some 'citement", and ran into the men's waiting room flourishing one of the wooden benches as a most effective souvenir dealer.

Another scene was a wild scramble for doors and windows and it was amusing indeed to see the fear which made believe that the weapon was harmless.

SKATING RINK MATTER AGAIN

John Waltar Files Answer to Action Brought against his Proposed Skating Rink on Hanover Street. For Other Purposes also.

John F. Walter, through his attorneys, J. L. Williams Esq., has filed an answer to the equity bill of some weeks ago by C. S. Reaver and W. M. Henry to prevent the use of his "Garden Auditorium" now in course of erection on Hanover street, for roller skating purposes.

The plaintiffs allowed originally as their reasons for asking the action against Mr. Walter's project that the street "is a residential street only and is free from disturbing noises and annoyances from trades, occupations, amusements and nuisances." Mr. Walter answer denies this saying that the portion of Hanover street in question and the "vicinity thereabouts has not been and is not now a residential street only, but the same has been and is now agricultural land and used for farming purposes generally."

Mr. Walter further states that, at the time the original bill was taken by John D. Keith and George J. Benner, attorneys for the plaintiffs, the defendant had prepared plans and contracted for the material and work relative to the erection of the auditorium of the building and that he now has on hand the material and work and frame building of dimensions 58 x 120 feet.

In the building, says Mr. Walter's lawyer, is as planned and will be conducted as a first class auditorium and will often hundred people and will be provided with toilet rooms and lavatories, with permanent seating accommodations for about 250 people, and is intended for use for the general convention hall for meetings, conventions, assemblies, lectures such as the county may come to and are held on the Battlefield of Gettysburg.

It was and is the intention of the defendant, he continues, to call such building the "Garden Auditorium" and when not used as above mentioned, to hold therein Roller Skating, Food sales, etc. either under his own direction or that of churches, societies etc. It is also was and is the intention of this defendant to provide said building with a suitable restaurant, and that when the building is not used as above set forth, to hold therein dances, balls, and dances, open to the public under proper restrictions and supervision.

FIRE IN NEW OXFORD

Barn and Store Goods of Squire Strevy Destroyed.

The barn of R. M. Strelay, New Oxford, was totally destroyed by fire Sunday night about eleven o'clock. Mr. Strelay states that he knows of no way that the blaze could have been started except by an incendiary and that he has no clue as to the guilty matter.

Firing five shots at close range in the bar-room of the City Hotel about half past Two morning Joseph Black, colored, narrowly missed inflicting serious injury to Charles Tyson, colored, at whom the shots were fired, and no one else was hit. The latter he was arrested by Chief of Police Sheaker a short distance down town, and after a hearing before Squire Hill, $1092.

In a report submitted to the War Commission the original cost of each of the monuments damaged in preparation together with the likely expenditure necessary to make the repairs.

The appropriation of the amount named has been recommended by the House Appropriations Committee in the Deficiency Appropriation bill. This is the first time such a condition has been perpetrated on a national battlefield under the control of the government, with the single exception of the monument at Shiloh battlefield. Assistant Secretary of War Crowder says that the result of an outburst of a crazy man."

The Fifth Corps marker on Sedgwick avenue, a mailbox even with sculptured figures, and the statue of the sorrow of the cross and the top of the Pennsylvania monument were damaged.

The granite shaft of the 37th Massachusetts cavalry was damaged by the concussion of the shells in the relief at the side of the shaft. The original cost of this monument was about $1500. The Pennsylvania monument was allowed for repairs $800. The underground cable which is somewhere will, of course, be allowed to stand.

At the 96th Pennsylvania monument on Hancock avenue, where the damage was done to the reclining soldier, the original cost of which was $5000, the nose, one hand, one foot, and one knee of the figure will be the original cost $2200. Estimated cost to replace figure and base $1120.

The 14th New York, a granite obelisk with double base, was damaged by the concussion of shells. Several corners chipped and broken. Original cost $1125. Cost to replace broken parts $162.

The 40th New York, in the Valley of Death, was damaged and the figure defaced by the breaking of the cap piece, the nose and mouth and chipping of the arm, and parts of the gun. The entire figure will be replaced. Original cost of $1500. The original cost of the monument was $2225.

The Pennsylvania monument on Wright avenue, with the massive sculptured figure, cost $1200 to repair the damaged statue. The lower jaw of the figure will be replaced, and the left tail and other sections of the body. The original cost of this monument $5000.

Small pieces were chipped off the memorial to the 72nd Pennsylvania the original cost of which was $1115. Cost to repair, estimated, $100.

The 40th Pennsylvania on Howe avenue is a polished shaft with guns in relief. It was badly knocked about, off the guns. Original cost $1500, estimated for repairs $200.

Twenty pieces were chipped from the Pennsylvania on Wheatfield road. Original cost $1000. Estimated to replace $150.

It is believed that there will be no delay in making the necessary appropriations, as the work of restoration is skilfully repaired by Colonel Copp and his assistants, with their original perfect condition by the replacement of all broken and needed parts.

So far as is known, there was the motive of the crime, as well as the opportunity. None of the men were in any way accessible. Special efforts have been made to find the murderer's address and to apprehend the guilty person, as the findings have never been made a matter of public record.

NEAR EPIDEMIC

Typhoid Fever Epidemic in Some Cumberland Valley.

With twenty-one cases of typhoid fever now in existence between Carlisle and Mechanicsburg, many of the having been reported to the town of Mechanicsburg, the Board of Health and Department of Health has now taken the matter in charge and Dr. Harvey B. Gilbert, assistant health commissioner, made an inspection tour of the infected district Friday.

Dr. Bassham thinks the epidemic originated from the drinking of well water that was polluted with typhoid germs. In about four or five doubtful cases, blood tests are now being made, samples of blood having been sent to Philadelphia for the purpose. It is thought, however, that these are mild forms of typhoid fever.

YOUNG BOY VERY SERIOUSLY HURT

John Gleberer, of Baltimore, 17 years of age, was probably fatally injured at the Musselman Canning Company plant at Gardners Friday afternoon at 4:45 when he was whirled around in a pulley wheel. The little fellow's right leg was almost torn from its socket and his body in a mass of bruises and contusions. He was thrown on the afternoon train and is now in the Harrisburg hospital where he is suffering grievously from shock. Physicians have little hope for his recovery.

Young Gleberer was employed as a helper at one of the machines driven by chines. It appears that the belt came off the pulley and, in trying to put it back, he accidentally caught it. He was drawn around the shaft and was terribly injured before the machine could be stopped. The engineer was at once notified and the power shut off immediately. The foreman in charge of the plant was only two feet away from the boy when the accident occurred. No other person was in the building at the time. The young man was brought in the car to Gardners and from there to the hospital in this city, where he arrived at 6:30 o'clock.

The operators of the pealing machine, which the boy was operating, were not to put on the belts themselves and that the man in charge of the machine was to do this work. It is considered strange that the young man was put at this work as the canning operates at a low speed.

His father is employed at the plant and went with him to Harrisburg.

Pie Crust.

This is a French crust made by the careful tailor housewife in order to use up the scraps of pastry. Any morsel of bread is always put away for the pie crust. Sometimes enough scraps is made into pan cutin; some are used for meat pies, and some for stuffings. The recipe is simple: Put in a bowl a cupful of bread crumbs and a few fraught (mushrooms), and try to butter, then add a cupful of browned and the vegetables cooked, one or three eggs, according to the spoonfuls of tomato sauce and some veal soup or gravy. Mix this thoroughly in the bread, cut into slices, adding a little of the mixture to each slice, or some ten minutes. When taken out of the oven and the bacon rind and some grated Parmesan cheese are added. Serve what looks rather like a child's pap.

Devil's Food Cake.

Combine mixtures one and two, then add vanilla. Bake in layers. Put cake together with white frosting.

Place apples in a deep earthen dish with boiling water, to which add a teaspoonful to each apple. Bake until the apples in sauce is a hot oven, basting often. When done remove from the dish and fill cores with apple jelly and put a spoonful on the top of each before baking. The sprinkle the whole with chopped nuts and serve with cream, whipped or plain.

When Hanging Pictures.

When hanging pictures over a plastered wall always dip the nail into wax before driving it into the plaster. This helps the nail to enter easier in the wall and therefore will hold a considerable weight without loosening.

For Enamel Pans.

When washing enamel pans never use soda to remove stains, but sapoli and sand. This helps the enamel to last afterward with warm water.

An Author - Publisher

By ANDREW C. EWING

Leslie Robinson was the son of a gentleman. His father sold his farm and with the money he was started in being made editor of the high school paper. He was, also, in the literary fever. A great many stuff it, and only those were in whom the literary passion was real nothing to feed on. Leslie was not; therefore he found nothing to make him uncomfortable at college.

Ans, the money ran out as constitutional as the fever. It was time for the old Puritans life is best as it is. It is not the fashion to be comfortable. It is considered by servers. But in literary matters for if one is to follow them there are resident requirements.

Leslie Robinson was one unfortunate, according to his father's idea, when he went to university life to be made edited of the university annuaries. He edited never reverted the highest editor. He was unconscious of the fact that the reason they took Dick was that was because those with which they competed were not in the literary problem there.

Mrs. Robinson Sr., died while his son was in college. The publishing business of the late Mrs. Robinson, who was to be carried on. He Leslie Robinson, Jr., was to be the publisher. After which the son was to manage the interests he had inherited. He promised to have business men and bankers become the trustee of the establishment. Leslie Robinson, Jr., graduated and also practiced his business talents he might have used in the publishing business. He considered himself rather a business man than a literary man. Finding time to manage a publishing business and to edit a literary paper he did both. The wait articles to the publishing business and the editorials received. They were good articles, so they were the publishing business. Robinson to ask how much their accept. They were told that they would be sent to their having been offered by the head of the publishing house of Robinson & Co.

Leslie and Mr. Robinson brought out a novel. It was accepted by the publishing house of Robinson & Robinson. Robinson swarmed to publish it and Leslie, Jr., was to edit it. The novel took in that it a success men and women. The novel was of sufficient merit to insure a reprint. It was a book of high literature. It was still young to the business or to the public to be able to fully appreciate the type the love for profit. The poet discovering a novel and the public not been forced to live on the income he derived from his writings.

Robinson published several books, and Leslie, Jr., edited them. He succeeded in becoming well known as an author, but he was not known as a publisher. Robinson for what he wrote. By and by Leslie, Jr., began to write books. He began to give them his books for publication. He was not known as a writer. Robinson Leslie was very proud of himself. He was very proud of his publishing house. He was very proud of himself. He asked him why if his books were valuable to the publishing house were not valuable to him. He replied that they were not valuable to the publishing. It appear that he could not get any other house to take the risk of doing so.

Leslie presented a plot which a good deal of money made. It did not require a great deal for her to see that her husband was not a successful man. She knew that persons are apt to be successful in the things which are easily pulled up with a little encouragement. She knew that Robinson went, the day she had the temerity to suggest that her husband was not sufficiently fitted for business—that he was not a publisher. She knew that Robinson without his name it could not be a literary gem. And she had the temerity to abide by the two.

Leslie, Jr., was married to the publisher who had him for not all his books were published. He returned with a printed "unavailable" card. He was not a writer. He was a literary prize. For the next six months Leslie, Jr., was out of work and to his brother publishers. Most of them were willing to help him. Considering this meant that they were making up their minds to let him go. But they were too busy to examine it. At the end of the year of the six months' period, the author of which had stood the test of time. It appeared that this man would find a publisher and that he would be a successful publisher. He saw firm. Sending his manuscript to a publisher. He was willing to allow it to be edited sooner, but he always had to wait for the publisher's report.

The author was at he has to wait for the publisher's report. He was not sad.

No one knows why Leslie Robinson stopped writing except his wife. Perhaps it was that his publishers spoiled when he would his business. But he always had his publishers. He died accidentally from not paying attention to the traffic while crossing.

FRUIT GROWERS HELD SESSIONS

State Horticultural Association and Adams County Growers Hear Talks from Practical Orchardists on Timely Questions.

About 150 fruit growers, Adams County orchardists and their guests from every part of the State, were entertained Wednesday afternoon and evening by some very interesting and instructive conference sessions in connection with the business of horticulture.

There were two sessions in Brua Chapel, the afternoon meeting starting promptly at 1:30 and the evening at eight o'clock. In the afternoon addresses were made by C. J. Tyson, State Dairy and Food Commissioner; Dr. H. A. Surface, State Economic Zoologist.

Mr. Tyson made a short address of welcome and was followed by Dean Watts, of State College, who for nearly an hour held the attention of the instruction offered in agriculture at the institution which he represented. He told of the management of the 1,000 acre farm which the college owned and spoke of the value of construction and practical work done by the students in the institution's department. He emphasized the fact that State College was ever ready to assist community leaders and succeeding in their endeavors.

Prof. F. W. Fagan was the next speaker, his subject being "Practical Hints in Orchard Practice Not to Learn from our Neighbors." He told of the work being done by the experiment New York State, of cultivating and caring for an orchard, the use of fertilizers, the best methods of handling labor, when help is most needed, the method of setting out trees, pruning fruit and things in general pertaining to the best results to be care of fruit trees interestingly explained.

Dr. H. A. Surface, State Economic Zoologist, was the speaker of the afternoon and he had with him specimens of the San Jose scale of peaches which he had grown in his own orchards. He told of the experiments he has had in connection with fruit, the methods of cultivation he recommends for the best results in the orchard and gave his audience many practical and important points in fruit raising.

At the evening meeting addresses were made by Dr. Philip B. Wagner, Exeter, N. Y. and U. G. Border of Baltimore. Dr. Wagner had as his main subject the "Middleman" and he very cleverly explained that the work of the middleman is considered by all the scapegoat of civilization. The present cost of living he explained is one subject and he also gave some reasons why middlemen are blamed for so much. "The man who owns a 30 h. p. car today," said Mr. Phillips, "must overdo to-morrow or he is not in the running. The American people as a rule regard it as a luxury to eat fruit. He closed his talk by explaining the Bulletin No. 144 which has recently been acted in New York to batter the conditions of marketing fruit and the prices resulting therefrom.

The last address was by U. G. Border, of Baltimore, whose talk was on "Advertising Apples". Mr. Borden explained why the apple business was depressed, was not of more consequence saying that no advertising was done and no concerted action was entered into to increase the consumption of the most widely used and desirable fruits of all civilized countries.

He used statistics to show that fruit of all kinds was becoming more of a necessity than formerly and that, of all fruits, whether tropical or not, the apple is king and should justly be so.

ANOTHER 50TH ANNIVERSARY

Plan Celebration of the Semi-Centennial of National Cemetery Dedication Would Commemorate Lincoln's Address

Another fiftieth anniversary plan is proposed and will be carried to consummation the fall of the session of the 50th and Adams County teachers' institute.

November 19, which falls on Wednesday of institute week, will mark the fiftieth year that Secretary Abraham Lincoln delivered the address at the dedication of the Soldiers' National Cemetery, an address which will live as long as the record of any portion of the United States history is preserved. Gettysburg should not allow this anniversary to pass by without in some way marking some note of it, and County Superintendent Bish is now formulating plans whereby the teachers of the county may join in the ovation.

The committee has not matured plans of the celebration are being reserved and Prof. Bish will be in receipt of them persons, actually interested, of various lines for the proper observance of the day.

There are living in Gettysburg and vicinity a number of persons who resident Lincoln deliver the memorable address and who are excellent recollections of all the occurrences of the memorable day. It is the desire to get as many of these present as possible and, in order that arrangements may be made to that end, all those who were present at the time are asked to communicate fact immediately to the Gettysburg Times.

The monument to Lincoln's Address in the National Cemetery has never been dedicated and it has been suggested that it would be well, the weather permitting, to hold the exercises on the spot where he spoke. An afternoon will be given over to the occasion and an elaborate program will be carried out.

School authorities in a number of progressive cities of the commonwealth observe in a fitting manner the anniversary of the Gettysburg Address and Roth has received from various places requests for information regarding the date of delivery and what is the proper sort of recognition would be.

FRESHMEN GET FIRST HAZING

Opening night at Gettysburg College without the usual frolic, despite notice of posters and other actions of the old students, the celebration starting about ten o'clock and continuing well into the morning hours.

The lamp standard in the center of the campus was again the scene of much of the fun and here all of the freshmen had to "submit" to whatever hazing the upperclassmen had in store, were gathered and made to perform for the benefit of a large body of spectators. Each freshman was given a definite race in which a number were required to participate. The fun of the season was a happy diversion while practically all the remaining the big trees proved an exciting pastime.

For an hour or more the affair was on in full swing the screams of the lusty of victims performing one set of stunts after another and the wild cheering would be under the direction of another squad of upperclassmen. Half the men were asked their names and in order to impress them upon all present they were made to sing them full, name, whistling vigorously after each address and after the vocalistic recital. Freshman displayed vocal ability. They failed to meet with the approval of their directors and the program brought into frequent use.

Immediately after the close of the festivities a band of Sophomores started out in good old fashion pastime giving advice on the conduct of the new men, calling them names and in many cases displaying a few literary prowess of the second year men. They met little or no opposition from the Freshmen but Officer Emmons prohibited the parading of the crowd through town and the usual defacement of properties was avoided this year.

A jolly ride party of students secured an automobile during the night and they made a merry journey. Many of the machine at the lamp post where it was found this morning and returned to its owner.
